THE MOUTH IS THE GATEWAY FOR THE ENTRANCE OF DISEASE.

Professor Miller has proved conclusively that no fewer than 38 different infections may be traced with more or less directness to the human mouth as a focal or starting point. The mouth being the gateway for the entrance of disease, therefore, it is here that the fight must begin to keep the enemy out.

HUDSON'S EUMENTHOL JUJUBES

are the most powerful, safe, and pleasant Germicide and Antiseptic known, being destructive to all organisms which give rise to infectious diseases; they are the ideal Antiseptic for keeping the mouth in a sweet, healthy condition.

Recommended by the Medical World, viz.:—"The Lancet," "The Australasian Medical Gazette," "The Practitioner," "Medical Press and Circular," "Medical Review," "Practical Medicine," Delhi (India).

THE MEDICAL PRESS and CIRCULAR says:—"These Jujubes should be of special service to Lecturers, Public Singers, Speakers, and, indeed, to all who are called upon to use their voices frequently for prolonged periods."

DURING THE LAST THREE WEEKS.

Which proves there are some people patriotic enough not to tie up their money during the war scare, and wise enough to get the car they want before the supply fails, or the prices get higher (as they will do). Here are the names of the purchasers:—

W. E. Hart, Esq., Parramatta.
F. Havenhand, Esq., Portland.
F. Hicks, Esq., Tamworth.
W. Kent, Esq., Haberfield.
C. Mackaness, Esq., Drummoyne.
Mark Lees, Esq., Liverpool-street.
J. Pascoe, Esq., Orange.
C. W. Rutherford, Esq., Bathurst.
Mrs. Richardson, Mudgee.
C. L. Russell, Esq., Kensington.
A. Preston, Esq., 55 Pitt-street.
Miss Tout, Young.

We all might as well get used to the war anyway—it will evidently stay around for some time—therefore why do without an article you would have bought had the war never come.

WHY HOARD UP YOUR MONEY?

It won't benefit you anyway after the war is over—if you spend it now it is true patriotism. Remember, every article exported from England is helping England—Remember, every few pounds you spend here is keeping the shops open, the factories busy, and boats running.—Remember, it's your duty to do your portion of keeping the wheels of commerce moving.

"SINGER."
The baby runabout—the miniature edition of the most perfect car ever built. The only small car made strong enough and powerful enough to stand up over the worst roads.

"ARROL-JOHNSTON."
The nearest approach to the ideal car for our roads ever built in England. The small touring car which goes anywhere—lasts for ever, and costs little to run.

"DARRACQ."
The rage of England and France—The newest creation on wheels—A wonderful new car, designed by the best motor-man in England.

"OAKLAND."
The Value for money car—Every comfort and convenience, including "Delco" electric starting and lighting. Medium weight, powerful, and elegant.

"CHALMERS."
The proven car for the rough use—the car which can't wear out, no matter how badly it's treated—The Car we all know—With the good reputation.

"WE GUARANTEE SERVICE."

THE EFFECT OF THE WAR ON THE MOTOR TRADE.

Buyers should realise that, owing to the war in Europe, and the converting of all public and private motor vehicles into Military Transport, together with the total disorganisation of all European Factories, there will be a tremendous shortage of Motor Cars for export for fully two years to come. This will mean an all-round rise in prices. American manufacturers will reduce their outputs on account of losing the export markets.

Australian producers of raw materials will secure, as the result of the war, higher prices than ever before.

We have decided to offer our present limited stock at their original prices, without advance of any kind, and we advise purchasers to book their orders now, as prices are sure to advance at an early date. We recommend you to see the following cars:—

OVERLAND.

35-h.p. Touring Cars and Roadsters. The Overland has won its way in Australia on sheer merit. There are thousands now on the roads giving the best of service.

With electric lighting equipment and every necessary of the highest class.	£365.
With Gray and Davis Electric Generator additional	£375
With Gray and Davis Electric Self-starter and Generator	£395

CAR-NATION.

A high-quality light car, with every refinement and improvement in construction found in the best cars on the road. A wonderful proposition.

2-seater Model	£229

SAXON.

The lowest-priced full-size runabout ever built. 15-h.p., 4-cylinder, gate change, cantilever springs, stream-line body, with hood, screen, lamps, generator, and all fittings	£165

PLENTY "CADILLACS" IN STOCK!

We are fortunate in having on hand a good stock of these grand cars. We will continue to sell them at pre-war prices; but when the present lot are sold there may be a jump in prices.

A "CADILLAC" IS ALWAYS A GOOD ASSET

COME IN TO-DAY and select a handsome 1914 Model, with self-starter, electric light, and all the equipment that a modern car should possess. There's just the chance that, if you put it off, even for a month, you'll have to pay heavily for the delay.

THE "KING."

Another American production. It carries the Ward-Leonard Self-starter, Magneto and Dry-cells Ignition, and Dynamo for Electric Lights. It is beautifully sprung on the Cantilever System. Full Floating Axle, and high-grade construction in every part. It is 30-35 H.P., and has generous clearance.

PRICE, COMPLETE, AND READY FOR THE ROAD,

WISE PEOPLE WILL BUY NOW. THE OTHER SORT WILL WAIT—AND PAY.

FURTHER PROOF OF HUPMOBILE SUPERIORITY

Paragraph taken from "Australian Expeditionary Force" column in Melbourne "Argus," dated 24th August, 1914.

MOTOR AMBULANCE.

"An object of special interest in camp yesterday was the handsome Motor Car bought by private subscription and presented to the Field Ambulance. It is certainly the last word in medical transport in warfare, and includes some most novel features. The car is a Hupmobile of the latest pattern, and includes an electric self-starting apparatus. The dynamo of this is used to charge the accumulators of a complete X-ray plant carried on board, and Dr. Argyll (with whom the whole idea originated) has hopes that it may even be found practicable to work the X-ray direct from the dynamo. The sides of the car have been so constructed as to carry tents and equipment complete, and altogether it ought to be an invaluable asset to the ambulance corps.

"An interesting feature, and one bringing home the realities of modern warfare, is the fact that, in addition to the conventional red crosses on the sides of the car, there is a large cross painted on the roof, for the benefit of too-energetic aviators, who might otherwise be tempted to make the car a target for their bombs."

His Excellency the Governor-General also uses a HUPMOBILE.

BUICK. GOOD MOTOR CARS.

Many persons are under the impression that the Buick we sell is the same as the Car sold to the American Public. Such is not the case—the Car we sell, known as the Export Model, is totally different, costs more, and is more suitable for our trying roads.

AXLES ARE STRONGER. LARGER TYRES.
WHEELS ARE STRONGER. BETTER STEERING.
FRAMES ARE STRONGER. LARGER BODY.

We have never known accidents to occur, or ever a Buick Car to overturn—to our minds we honestly believe Buicks to be the safest Car on the roads.

WE KNOW OF NO BAD BUICKS.

RUNABOUT—£315.
TOURING—£375.

IT PAYS US TO ADVERTISE, BECAUSE

last Saturday we advertised two second-hand METZ Cars for sale, and the £160 one was promptly purchased.

But the £130 one is left still and can be purchased this week. It has been thoroughly overhauled by us, and you can, therefore, ABSOLUTELY RELY upon its giving you satisfaction.

The new ones at £190 complete, and fully equipped for active service can also be seen at our Garage.

The METZ "22" is built throughout in America and is NOT A GERMAN Car, as you might suppose from its name.

It is extremely smart and attractive in appearance, and very very cheap to run.

We can refer you to upwards of 300 METZ owners, who will be only too glad to substantiate the claims we make for this handy little car.

YOUR OWN HOME IS EASY TO ACQUIRE AT ROSEBERY,
ROSEBERY,
"The Model and Industrial Suburb."

£50 covers the Deposit, while the balance is paid at the rate of 25s per week.

Could you conceive of an EASIER way to BUY A HOME, pretentious in style, size, and fitment, and situated in a locality fast becoming the most popular Residential Area in the State, than by means of these pay-week-by-week Terms?

You have everything to gain and NOTHING to lose in a proposition such as this. A locality that is "protected" as to the style of Home allowed on the Estate MUST always be in demand as a Home Site and an investment. So that every Pound you put into your Home is recoverable WITH INTEREST should you, for any reason, desire to sell.

But the PRESENT is the main consideration, and you find that there are many advantages to be gained by Dwelling in a grand ROSEBERY Cottage. For instance, there is the feeling of independence; there is no Landlord and Rent Book; no Rental increases or unexpected notices to quit—you are COMPLETE MASTER of your Home. When you leave for work in the morning, you carry with you the thought that your wife and children are safely provided for, NO MATTER WHAT HAPPENS. Then, when evening comes, there's health, pleasure, and profit to be derived from growing things in your OWN Garden for YOURSELF.

These are but a few considerations. Many others are at once patent to the man who is truly ambitious and alert to his opportunities.

Go into this proposition with us TO-DAY—it will PAY, PAY, PAY.

"Independent Cottage," CABRAMATTA PARK.

TO WILL LINGERLONGER,
STANMORE.—

Dear Friend,

I am now settled in my new home on Cabramatta Park Estate, which I purchased from H. Pritchard, "The Landsalesman," Auburn. Please come up next week, and you will meet the caretaker, Mr. Kervin, on the Estate, who will show you over, and you will have a good opportunity to select a suitable site for your new home. Come as soon as you can. The sooner you come, the sooner you will avoid the necessity of paying rent.

No deposit is required, and no interest is charged. You can select lots from quarter acre to seven acres. Prices from £20, and 2s 6d per week pays it off. There is enough timber on the lot for your fence, and also to provide all the hardwood for your cottage.

Kindly ask Mr. Brawback, the Landlord, to send me the bundle of unpaid accounts, which I left behind on a shelf in his cottage. I am now able to pay them all.

Your Friend,
I. B. A. WISEMAN.

DIRECTIONS TO FIND IT.

Take train to Cabramatta, walk along main Cabramatta-road (on right-hand side of Station), till you come to my advertising boards. There you will find the caretaker, Mr. J. Kervin, who will be pleased to show you round at any time.

H. PRITCHARD, "THE LANDSALESMAN," AUBURN.

LIFE IN LONDON AND THEREABOUT.

(CHRONICLED BY SIR HENRY LUCY.)

Bursting of the War Cloud—Immediate Effect—Possible Consequences—"Empty London"—How Mr. Chamberlain Learned to Speak—Dukes in the House of Lords.

WESTMINSTER, July 31.

Sudden outbreak of a long-smouldering war between Austria and Servia may possibly have some influence in the patching up of our own political quarrel round Ulster. Exponents of feeling and opinion on both sides are agreed that in the presence of this ominous event their ranks should close up in preparation for emergency. The sentiment is amiable, and the conclusion just.

We in this country have nothing to do with the quarrel between Austria and Servia, and might well be content to let the parties to it fight it out among themselves. Unfortunately when once the torch of war is lighted in Europe no one can say whose thatched roof may not catch the flame. As a matter of precaution our fleet—which by chance on the very eve of the declaration of war presented a splendid spectacle moored in long lines at Spithead—has been mobilised, and is ready to go anywhere and do anything a turn of events may necessitate. Thanks to the promptness and sagacity of Sir Edward Grey, Britain was early in the field with proposals designed to avert war. They were not immediately successful, but may bear fruit after the lust for a neighbour's blood and territory has been satiated by a battle or two. One compensation for the burden of the cost of great armaments is that in modern times war is a business accomplished within a space of a few weeks. This, of course, assuming that it be confined to the two Powers already engaged. It may be quite another affair if Russia steps in.

It is apprehension of this event that accounts for the ominous lowering of that infallible barometer of international politics—the Stock Exchange. Within the last four days the tumbling down in the value of stocks has been frightful. The blow fell at the close of a long period of depression. The feeling of panic is world-wide, the markets of Europe and America, equally affected, acting and reacting upon each other. Happening at a time when the inevitable relapse consequent on prolonged period of booming trade is making itself felt, the prospect of the coming winter is gloomy in the extreme. When Mr. Lloyd George presented his last Budget he was taunted with the accusation of under-estimating the revenues of the financial year, with the object of making possible a popular budget to present to the country on the eve of a general election in June. Matters begin to look as if he might regard himself as a happy man if at the close of the financial year he shall have been able to make both ends meet.

It seems ridiculous to say, and it is a common observation, that Goodwood week marks the end of the season, and that thereafter London is "empty." It is true that no self respecting member of London society will show him or herself in accustomed haunts after Goodwood is over. There is no mistake about the influence of the tradition. During the present week there has been a decided slump in social engagements. Even ordinary correspondence has fallen away in marked degree. The traffic west of Charing Cross has diminished to such an extent that it is possible, going north or south, to cross Piccadilly without waiting five minutes or more before the omnipotent policeman with uplifted hand temporarily stays the traffic surging east and west.

Still, there are a few millions left in the metropolis. In spite of the counter-attractions of Margate and Ramsgate, in this quarter more potent than Goodwood, there is no sign of falling away in street traffic, whether on road or pavement. Some compensation for disappearance of holiday-making Londoners is found in the influx of foreign visitors, who are met everywhere, walking with Baedeker in hand, or taking their pleasure sadly on overcrowded brakes, passing from one central point of interest to another. As for Parliament, with habitually stern sense of duty, it sits on regardless of Goodwood, unmindful of Bank Holiday, which befalls next Monday. As yet the end is not in sight, the most sanguine forecast of the date of prorogation fixing it third week of August.

In the multitude of tributes paid on the day after his death to the commanding genius of Mr. Chamberlain, it was commonly agreed that as a Parliamentary debater he was unsurpassed even by his great contemporaries Gladstone and Bright. It was assumed that his faculty for lucid, often dangerously sparkling speech was a gift of nature, as reading and writing came to Dogberry. There was, of course, some foundation for this theory. But there was a secret behind his success unsuspected by the world. Talking on the subject at a comparatively early stage of his Parliamentary career, he told me that what was apparently effortless was the result of painstaking practice. As everyone knows, he began by taking part in debate in the Town Council of Birmingham. He was, almost from the outset, successful in attracting and holding attention. Then, as was his custom in the House of Commons, a half-sheet of notepaper sufficed for the notes from which his speech was expanded. The real work of preparation was done in his study. He wrote out his speech at length. If, on reading it, he were not satisfied, he wrote another on varied lines. Occasionally, if the issue were important, he tried the effect on a devoted friend, partly reading, partly reciting, his speeches in succession. When his choice was settled he got the speech off by heart, and it was so delivered. To those familiar with his later triumphs, whether in the House of Commons or on the platform, this story would be incredible if it were not recalled from his own utterance. Naturally, with life-long practice, the drudgery of his early Birmingham days was intermitted. But therein was laid the foundation of his supremacy, a lesson useful to the beginner of to-day.

Among other linking-up of historic events, the present year marks the centenary of the Duke of Wellington's taking his seat in the House of Lords. Reference to contemporary records discloses some interesting particulars. The new peer entered, attended by the Duke of Norfolk (Earl Marshal) and the Duke of Richmond and Beaufort. In anticipation of the event there was a full House, and a crowd of Commons, at that period apparently permitted to assemble in the space before the throne, a privilege to-day reserved for Privy Councillors and the elder sons of peers. Then, as now, the new peer was conducted to the Woolsack, where, on bended knees, he delivered to the Lord Chancellor the writ calling him to the House. Thence he proceeded to the table, where the reading Clerk read in succession the stately list of his patents of peerage—Baron Douro, Viscount Talavera, Earl of Wellington, Marquis of Douro, Marquis of Wellington, and finally, Duke. "His Grace," it was written, in a newspaper just a hundred years old, "took the usual oaths of allegiance and abjuration, and then sat down along with the attendant dukes on the ducal bench."

Here is a striking departure from the practice of to-day. The present House of Lords knows no ducal bench, their Graces condescending to sit about with the common herds of barons, earls, and marquises. The late Duke of Argyll, with characteristic modesty, on the somewhat rare occasions when he put in an appearance, bid himself away on a bench below the gangway. The Dukes of Bedford, Beaufort, Buccleugh, Grafton, Hamilton, Leinster, and the rest are equally content to efface themselves. It is a curious fact that since the disappearance from the scene of the late Duke of Devonshire, the most highly-rated members of the peerage habitually are nonentities in the Legislative Chamber. You may in vain search the Parliamentary reports in the morning papers for a speech containing pearls of wisdom from ducal lips.

A WOMAN'S LETTER.

The Rumbling of War.

LONDON, July 31.

I am just returned from my holiday at Onival-Sur-Mer, the bright little Picardy beach, where we spent nearly three weeks. It is always a useful experience to go abroad to a place where one's countrymen are not seen. I say this from the point of observing the manners and ways of a place which is untouched by foreign influences. At Onival we only spoke English to each other, and to some friends who came over from Ault, the adjoining place for bathing. We left on Tuesday last, the 28th, when the first thrill of war had just shaken France. One has to be in a country where every man is, or has been, soldier or sailor to realise what it means to every homestead. All through Monday night the telegraph office was open continuously, the wires and telephones calling up men and officers to rejoin their regiments. Our landlady told us that if France is involved in the struggle between Austria and Servia, both her sons would have to go; they are of Norman race, which breeds the finest and tallest men in France. I often watched workmen coming in and out, and the drivers of vans, and thought they could hold their own with our own, men. So broadly built, and of such good proportions. Their height is also much greater than in any part of France. It is in Normandy that most of the cavalry is raised. We saw the men in the barracks at Eu. The Norman horses hardly vary, they are for the most part fine grey animals. On our way down to Dieppe, through Picardy, we saw the first touch of mobilisation, a young soldier was making his way to rejoin his regiment, carrying a large bouquet of roses, doubtless brought by his old mother, for we saw her take leave of him, and the tears flowing over her brown-lined face. We never can realise war in all its horrors unless, like the Continental countries, our sons and kinsmen are obliged to serve, and we, ourselves, know it first hand, not from the broad sheets of the press. My daughter, who has been for 14 weeks touring in Italy, Austria, Germany, and Belgium, joined us at Onival, and told us how extraordinary it is to see the wonderful manner in which the Germans have arranged their railway system; from all the great centres such as Metz and other frontier towns the railways converge, so that troops may be sent off in all directions on almost straight lines. One curious thing I learnt, the French Government takes its conscripts en bloc, and drafts the men where she wants them. There is no choice of army or navy, the necessity of France in either direction decides the destination and service of the conscript. I hear that the scarlet trousers of the French infantryman are at last to be abolished. He is to serve in a kind of khaki tweed.

Dress of the Moment.

You will gather that a mere bathing beach out of the fashionable track does not offer much for the purposes of my letter. Here and there one saw a nice-looking French-woman with her children, making her way to the little cabines in which most of the day is spent, the children running about, making the usual canals and castles on the sand or trying to get shrimps with their tiny nets. The children wear almost indiscriminately knitted knickers and jerseys, only on Sundays do you see them dressed in ordinary fashion. Every child of either sex wore a cape, the cape is indeed a national wrap. This year the mothers wore them, too, and, with them the Canotier, or French sailor hat. This is the hat of the moment. And it requires careful thinking out. Most of them were in white from any material save straw that you can think of. Numbers of women wear them of white pique, made up without any trimming, and a band round the crown with a flat bow, the head in all cases going right into the crown. The ears are all covered. The hair usually worn waved, and wrapped closely about the head. The neat small head, although you wave the hair, is what is aimed at. It is astonishing what a difference waving makes when the hair is closely dressed. It relieves the face of hardness, and yet is beautifully neat. You will find that unless you attend to these little details your hats will not have the right look.

Of course I come back to London at the close of the summer sales, when things are at their most abject state. People have got all they want for their summer outfit, as well as evening gowns for their visiting, and for a month or two we shall hear nothing more. So I can only go over what will be wise to lay in store towards your own summer which, by the time this letter reaches you, will almost be in sight. Long tunics made of accordeon pleated ninon, or other soft material, will obtain for some time yet. It would not be a bad plan to have a well-out and closely-fitting pleated underskirt made in black glace silk, and use it to wear with different tunics. You could have them of black Chantilly lace, of plain black net, edged with a ruche, and one of black ninon, with, of course, blouse bodices matching each one. The sleeves of these thin bodices should be full and transparent, your arm showing right through from shoulder to wrist. They finish them off with a cuff and some killings in black. This outfit would be invaluable if you are visiting. The underskirt should be short and fitting like wax round your hips, the fulness is superimposed by the tunic. The effect is, in extreme cases, of Turkish trousers underneath. But they can be made without exaggeration, and look very charming. At the waist you require a broad black belt, made of corded ribbon or silk satin, anything you like, and it must have a broad bow made of four loops set into a buckle. This keeps a certain sense of waist, and makes for neatness, but you can wear your bow back or front, as you please. Some of the well-dressed Frenchwomen I saw had three tiered skirts, not made at all tight, with a sash tied in a broad bow at the back. None of the very thin dresses I saw in France were tight; I saw one made of accordeon pleated voile in blue and white stripes. No tunic and no drapery at all. Only a sash at the waist, and a white sailor hat, called there a canotier, with one fine rose at the side. These large, handsome roses are a feature of the French season. Only one rose is worn. Besides this I never saw dark navy serge gowns worn so generally. And they were beautifully cut and untrimmed, save for the white muslin collar which finishes all coats, whether in black or navy blue.

In ordering evening gowns you will do well to try for the Greek Chiton style of bodice and tunic. Many of the most elegantly dressed women wear a jewelled band to define the waist. Ladies who have many jewels are fond of resettings, and they use bands of gems over the shoulders. Some of the thin sleeves are made exactly like the Episcopalian sleeve, with a broad band of black at the wrist; the rest is full and unlined, only some dainty lace half sleeve of a camisole showing under. The cape is quite the furore of the year; you see it in every kind of material. In the winter we shall no doubt have more of a vest with sleeves, over which it will be fitted; one sees them at times now. This will double the warmth of the cape. In addition to this bathing capes are being made of sponge cloth in brilliant colours, Le Tango being conspicuous amongst them.

French Lace.

One trait of the French woman's character I must eulogise; she never seems to waste a moment of time. They did the most lovely white embroidery I have seen for years. Some did Richelieu, some broderie Anglaise, with wide spaces and barettes, bars; others were doing Venetian lace motifs to insert in their pieces of work. Some did crochet—crochet done as like filet lace as possible is a furore. Even on the deck of our Channel steamer numbers of English ladies were doing crochet, for some reason or another they do not as yet care so much for any of the forms of cut linen work as do the French. Our lady at Onival was doing what appeared to me a handsome piece of lace work, and on looking closer I found that she had made of linen crochet thread a long strip of treble crochet, like a galon. This she tacked, just as you do point lace braid-work, on to a tracing; she then connected the waving and undulations of her pattern with button-hole bars; here and there she put in a few of the well-known lace stitches, the button-holed looping, point-de-reprise, and so on. This would be done according to one's own tastes. It looked very handsome, and was quite simple in execution. I am thinking of making some squares of this kind of work for a table-cloth, alternating them with Richelieu squares in linen. I have during the time I was abroad done some fine filet crochet squares, which I edged with a narrow Cluny insertion, and then put the square into one of linen. In the corners of each square I did some sprays of satin stitch and broderie Anglaise, with the long open holes and bars. When they are all done I shall mount the squares with Cluny lace, and finish right round with one of these laces, which suit this style of work, a Cluny with tassels put on at intervals. In the markets at Ault there were whole stall, of the most beautiful Venetian, Cluny, and Bruges laces. The real Torchon is sold very cheaply, firmly made with good thread. I bought insertion in this make over an inch wide for 45 centimes the metre. The metre is four inches longer than our yard, so it was less than 4d in our money per yard. I found these lace stalls the only tempting things in the market. I bought two Venetian motifs for my cloth, and set them right in the middle of the designs.

THE CONDOMINIUM.

HISTORICALLY UNSOUND.

(BY PROFESSOR MACMILLAN BROWN.)

It needed no sage to foresee the failure of a makeshift like the condominium. Like all temporary expedients, it has satisfied neither party to it, not even that party which gets all the concessions. It was a compromise meant to plaster over a situation that was impossible and intolerable; and it has only served to bring out more obtrusively its impossible and intolerable character; whilst the parties to it who had been the chief breakers of the laws of nature and of man set themselves deliberately to flout its necessarily impracticable laws and regulations, and to evade any penalties that may attach to their breach. Any arrangement that will interfere with their liberty in this respect is essentially evil, and must be changed at all costs. Hence the perpetual change of French officials in spite of their aggressively passive attitude. The British officials do all that their limited number can to make the condominium law efficient; they are all of them Pooh-bahs on narrow salaries without prospect of promotion or pension. Their critics forget this, and gird against them for even their spasmodic vigilance; and the criticism becomes merciless when the inevitable delays and mistakes occur. But pooh-bahs wink at the omissions and transgressions that the other pooh-bahs so habitually and necessarily shut their eyes to if not condone. What else can they do? It is their natural role. If they did otherwise the "fat would be in the fire"; the "Entente Cordiale" would be endangered. "Keep the peace at all hazards, whatever occurs," one can imagine to be written large across all their other instructions.

THE RUSH TO RUIN INEVITABLE.

Many of the French plantations are in excellent order and well conducted, as one can easily see as he winds in and out amongst the islands. But a large proportion, it is as easy to see, is not prosperous—sunk in the last stages of financial phthisis. They started with a handsome mortgage over their lungs from the establishment of Monsieur Ballande, otherwise La Compagnie Francaise des Nouvelles Hebrides, or from that of Monsieur Bechade. The rise in the price of copra and the free admission of French-grown New Hebrides coffee into France were only palliatives and not cures of disease. The European Armageddon will give the "coup de grace" to most of them.

Now the only means these consumptive estates could use to put any vitality into them was on the side of labour. The natives must be made to work harder and longer, and on less. The result is as high an annual mortality on some French plantations as 44 per cent., and on most at least more than twice as high as the average on British plantations. The problem then was how to fill the vacancies made by overwork and under-sustenance. The law of the Condominium must be got round at all hazards: it enacts that "no engagements shall be concluded for more than three years," and "no re-engagement shall exceed the term of one year." But there was a blessed relief from these to be found in Article 42: (1) "Time lost through absence without good cause shall be added to the term of the engagement;" and (2) "A labourer may further be retained after his term of engagement expires as a punishment for breaches of discipline to which he has been duly sentenced." It is true that there was added to the last: "In such case, the additional period of labour shall not exceed two months for each year of engagement." Between the two clauses there was sufficient latitude to allow of stretching out the period of engagement to twice its permissible length; and, with the looseness of the arrangements for registration (the dating of it is left in the hands of the employer), the absence of all inspection even in pretence, and the lightning change of officials, there was every opportunity for stretching out the period of engagement to the "natural term" of the labourer's life. The result is that, though the number of recruits for French plantations registered during the last few years has been greatly decreasing, the number of labourers on them has remained constant. The greater strictness of the British labour regulations, along with the greater show at least of strictness in the administration of them, has prevented the appearance of such abuses on British plantations. The higher character of the British planters, taken as a whole, has probably a vast deal more to do with the prevention.

THE RESULTS OF QUASI-SLAVERY.

The comparison is patent in the comparative difficulty the two nationalities now find in recruiting. The natives fight shy of French recruiting vessels, and so, professional recruiters have to be employed to mask their operations, and not infrequently kidnapping has had to be resorted to. And both measures have led to reprisals. For Vila has no supervision of recruiting, and often exercises but little care in the issuing of licences to recruiters. Men of no principle and no regard for anything but the fourteen pounds per head they receive from the planters get licensed. Can we wonder at natives taking revenge for something that is not unlike the old slave trade so much reprobated this last humanitarian century? Nor must we forget that they show the same want of discrimination amongst whites as we show amongst men of other colour; they are all alike, and one white head will gratify the lust for revenge, as well as another, just as one black village shelled fulfils the duty of retaliation, as well as another. And this alternation of outrage and reprisal will continue till Malekula is depopulated.

MALEKULA THE HEART OF THE NEW HEBRIDES.

For it is Malekula that is the bellicose heart of the New Hebrides, just as Malaita is of the Solomon Islands. Both have thickly-forested mountains that shelter the mountaineering spirit in their recesses. Every man's hand is against his neighbour. No village but is kept in the keenest fighting trim by the knowledge that the next is its deadly enemy, as well as the speaker of a foreign language. There is never-ending warfare throughout the length and breadth of both Malekula and Malaita. And off their coasts lie islands that have become nests of native pirates; thither the coastal villagers fled from the raids of the bushmen, and there they fortified themselves partly by stone walls, chiefly by mastery of canoe navigation, against all attack. Every morning you can see a great fleet of dugouts making for the mainland; from them land the women, most with a child on the hip or the back, to work all day at the gardens in the bush, and one or two men with muskets over their shoulders to protect them from the raids or ambushes of the mountaineers. Back to the islet on the afternoon you can see the same fleet paddle, laden with food. But so strong and wealthy have these islet refugees grown that with their new-won power over the sea they have become raiders themselves, and are in the habit of pirating and plundering the adjacent coasts.

It is this state of affairs, with its everlasting alarms and struggles, that has made Malekula the most populous island in the New Hebrides; it is not nearly the size of Santo to the north, and yet it has three times the population; it is not nearly so fertile, yet it has twelve thousand to Santo's four; and the Santo villages are mostly on the coast. Like Malaita in the Solomons, Malekula is in the New Hebrides, the great arena for recruiting; its "boys" are most valued for their industry and energy; for, like the Malaitans, they are the most warlike, the most savage, and the most prolific, having, according to a fundamental law of Nature, the hardest struggle for life. It is the Malekulan boys, therefore, that are oftenest kidnapped, and as a natural sequence, it is from Malekula we get most of the stories of "outrages" and "assassinations." Only a few weeks before we got up to the island there had been a retaliatory expedition for a raid, and the expedition was ambushed, and several of the native police killed or wounded, and as we meandered round the islands we heard again and again of material for future "outrages" and retaliations. We could judge it not unlikely that Ambrym may be the next scene of such operations. For the French vessel that was supposed to be rescuing the refugees from the volcanic outbursts is generally believed to have kidnapped them for French plantations.

THE REMEDY IS TOO LATE IF NOT SOON.

This process of practical enslavement and fingering education of the natives can have but one end—the complete extinction of all but one—and as a consequence, the ennihila-tion of plantation industry and value. Before long the islands will be valueless to any nation, because of the absence of labour. The old slave traffic was far less suicidal; for the masters had as much interest in keeping their slaves well as in keeping their cattle, in good condition. The indenture system without appropriate and undivided government supervision is sheer waste of human labour and life, and ultimately of not merely profit, but capital.

DIVISION NO REMEDY.

It is time that for the sake even of the French capitalists themselves this mad rush for annihilation was stopped. And it never can be stopped except by unification of government. To divide up the group, even if it were possible to make a division that would satisfy both nationalities, is not solving the problem, but postponing it, like the Condominium. There would still be the same labour troubles and the same land troubles; we could have no security that the French would stop their present methods of kidnapping even from the British islands, and exhausting the supply of native labour; there would be unending trouble, as there is now, in settling the land claims of the two nationalities and in conserving the native rights. The French Republic changes its Ministry on an average at least once a year; and the colonial officials in Vila change as often. There is and can be no continuity in the policy towards the natives, towards the settlers of other nationalities, or towards the difficulties that will constantly arise with the neighbouring islands.

For the sake of the progress of the New Hebrides, of the development of the capital invested in them, of the investment of more capital, and of the conservation of native labour in order to make investment practicable there will have to be one Government, with a continuous, energetic, and humane policy, and that soon. Before a generation is over it will be too late; the doom that is now threatening the race will be upon it. There will be no labour to recruit. The capital already in the archipelago will have vanished. And the islands, rich though they are, will lie mere solitudes for the seabirds, unless they are seized by some wiser race than their present European masters, and filled with some more virile tropical labour.

ONLY A PERCHING PLACE FOR THE FRENCH.

If we are to judge by French occupancy of New Caledonia and Tahiti or by French methods in the New Hebrides, it is not the French that will put new heart into the people or new vitality into the development of the archipelago. They have their eye too steadily fixed on Paris to have permanent interest or settlement in a few tropical islands at the end of the world. They are vigorous pioneers and explorers in Africa, they are doing for the north of that continent as much as any European people could do for it. But the settlers and administrators there are within half of France, if not of Paris. They are contented to feel that within a few days they can be back again in their own loved country and capital. Besides, the climate is not so different from that of the Riviera as to make them feel exiled and discontented. These Pacific colonies are to them a mere pied a terre, and interest them only as supplying means to take them back to Paris.

A NATURAL ANNEXE TO AUSTRALIA.

The most natural suzerain and developer of these groups that lie so close to the Australian continent is Australia. The Australian does not feel exiled when he settles in the New Hebrides; he can send his children for education to Sydney, and himself go thither for a holiday every year. The group is, as it were, at his own door. If there was any settled political outlook for them, as under the British flag, his capital and his enterprise would enter freely into them, for he would know that he had his market close at hand. And it would be greatly to his interest to see that the natives were protected, in order that his labour might be sure.

But these are insignificant reasons compared with the strategic. There is, of course, no immediate danger to Australia from this group or part of it, being in the hands of a nation that can never have a sufficient fleet in the Pacific. There is, in short, no danger from any European nation, as long as Britain retains the bulk of the maritime traffic and naval dominance. But we cannot close our eyes to the possible results of having practically closed our doors upon the Oriental. Some day we shall have to reckon with the Orient on this account. It has gained self-confidence and aplomb since the Japanese defeat of Russia. It has now a pride that can be stung, and a spirit that will not accept permanent humiliation. And it will wait its day.

It is not always going to remain undeveloped and quiescent. The aggressive spirit has been roused, not yet in the military sphere, but in the industrial and commercial. And there are enormous possibilities in China, not as a nation, but as a field of exploitation: its coal fields, its quarry of cheap labour, and its market are beyond anything that the world has yet exploited. If Japan keeps her head and moral fibre, her proximity to the amorphous giant will give her the finest chance, and if she takes it as she is evidently doing, before this century is past its midpoint she will be the wealthiest nation in the Pacific, and the nation that has the greatest prestige in the Orient. Oriental human nature is not like ours if she resists the temptation to become the leader of Asia; nor is it like ours if Asia does not follow her on a crusade for the restoration of Oriental dignity. In other words, the old raids of the Huns, and Tartars, Turks and Magyars, by land into Europe will be repeated on sea into the ports of the Pacific Ocean. The United States of Canada, Australia, and New Zealand will have to stand to their guns.

AUSTRALIA ALONE CAN PROTECT THE GROUP.

Now, if the New Hebrides are held by a nation that can never place a large navy in the great new ocean, they will easily fall into the hands of the Asiatic sea crusaders, and a dagger will be plunged to the heart of Australasia. There will be no rest for her till she rids the neighbouring groups of their Oriental masters. The Pacific Ocean interests of France are so minute compared with her African Empire and France itself that it would be madness on her part to detach as much of her navy and army as would make these islands safe against Asiatic aggression. It is of infinite importance to Australia that they should never pass into the hands of Oriental masters, whilst it is of little or no importance to France.

When the Armageddon of Europe comes to a close and accounts are getting finally made up, it is of vital interest to Australia to press this point of view home upon the British negotiators. And at the same time it should be pressed upon the attention of the French that New Caledonia undefended is a menace to the political life of Australia; and if they are wise they will either sell their interests there to Australia, or delegate to her the duty of defending the island and its outliers from Asiatic ambitions. For she is preparing both on land and sea for her own defence. New Caledonia and the New Hebrides, if undefended, would be her Achilles' heel.

It should not be a serious matter to valuate French interests in both. It was worth Germany's while to pay Spain at the close of the war with America three-quarters of a million for Micronesia, including the Marshalls, the Carolines, the Mariannes (except Guam), the Pelews, Yap. They have together a population of about 50,000. The New Hebrides, including the Banks and Torres groups, have close on 65,000 natives, and are as volcanic archipelagoes richer and more forested. As present surveyors are busy all over them triangulating with fair accuracy their coastal regions. With these data before them, it should not be difficult for a commission of French and Australian business men to come to some definite valuation of French interests. And the New Caledonia problem would be still less difficult.

A conference has been sitting in Europe to solve Condominium impossibilities. Doubtless its report will but tinker the convention of 1906, which established the impracticable makeshift; or if it goes farther will recommend the postponement of the real difficulty by the equally impracticable division of the islands between the two Powers. The war will pigeonhole the report. But after it will come Australia's opportunity, which if she misses she will never have again. And the two groups will form a base of attack for Oriental retaliation that will lie as close to heart as Korea in Russian possession lay to the heart of Japan. The Condominium must be done with for ever, and so must its feeble substitute, intersession.

HANDS SWELLED AND CRACKED.

Ocean View, Lizards, Vic.—"Cuticura Ointment has cured my hands after suffering intense misery for several years. About seven years ago little red spots appeared on both hands, which itched so terribly that I would rub them with the nearest till the skin came off. They grew worse, swelled and cracked, causing great pain, which, however, was not so bad as the irritation. I have waked in the morning to find the pillow-case stained where I had scratched them while asleep. After being like this for about three years my hands gradually got better, but never well. A gentleman who had suffered from weeping eczema ... and who had tried everything cured himself with the Cuticura Remedies. He persuaded me to try the Cuticura Ointment, which I did. I used two tins of the Cuticura Ointment as directed, and my hands are well; the skin sound, smooth, and white, whereas since they first took bad they have been hard, cracked, and dry when not bleeding." NEW MUSIC.

Messrs. Cary and Co., of London, forward some of their latest publications. Probably the best of the songs in "Corinetta," by G. O'Connor-Morris. It is a beautiful old-world ballad, with a pastoral atmosphere that carries with it a touch of enchantment inspired by the lyrics. There are two examples of the Stanley Hawley edition of more or less classic pieces for piano, namely, Liszt's transcription of Wagner's "O Star of Eve," with the harp arpeggi faithful to the operatic scheme, and the Liszt setting of Schubert's exquisite "Hark, Hark, the Lark." The edition, beautifully printed, has some advantages in the way of fingering and phrasing. "Love's Perfect Day," words and music by Mary Gurney, is a brief, simple, and serious song finely harmonised. "A Lesson in Love," by Kitty Parker, is an effective little song for theatrical purposes. The love-nonsense of the lyrics is much too ardent for the drawing-room—but stage-costume covers a multitude of sins of that kind! The same composer's "In a Poppy Field" is of a popular character, melodious, reminiscent of various styles, and with an infusion of plaintive changes.

"Songs From Love's Garden," by Fk. Drummond, are perfectly printed, and issued under one cover. "The First Spring Day" is a playful, tender, and simple apostrophe to the crocus; "In Violet Time" is dainty; "Roses For You" is in a warmer and more animated style; and the group closes with "Summer Begins"—a sweet little collection of minor encore numbers. "Come, For it's June," by Dorothy Forster, is a decidedly taking song, and though it cannot be acclaimed original, it represents a joyous and richly-harmonised outburst in praise of a dawning summer. The same composer's "A Wild, Wild Rose," in a vague kind of way, suggests the style of the other, a fault due to over-production without waiting for inspiration. Her "Paradise" valse opens with a commonplace theme, but more work has been put into the second, and as all are melodious, a suitable ballroom contribution results. "Bon Jour, Marie," by Max Brunell, is an arch little vaudeville song, garnished with French phrases, and is of the kind which Margaret Cooper used to sing here. "Love is Ever Calling," by R. Penso, though conventional, can boast of a pretty refrain, with arpeggio accompaniment. "The Patchwork Quilt," by Dorothy Webb, is in the style of a musical monologue, simple, and to good verse. "The Little Piece of Ribbon in the Drawer," words by Leonard Pounds, and music by Rupert Hazell, is a serio-comic song, with a humorous change, in which the sentimental reflections of a husband are terminated by his wife's angrily switching on the light! "Caper Sauce," by Cecil Macklin, with a cleverly-designed title page, is a one or two step in ragtime rhythm, and is vivacious. Dorothy Forster's "Bonita" is a southern dance, which includes a tango, and possesses a pretty second subject. "The Cockney Crawl," by Cecil Macklin, is a lively dance, the merits of which could only be properly tested in the ballroom. Clara Evelyn's "La Flamme" is a fascinating valse, owing to its harmonics and rhythmic gaiety, and would please in the ballroom. "Charivari," by Tony Castle, is a new dance, invented by Professor Cook, and embraces ragtime, valse-time, and maxixe. The "Gloria" valse, by Cecil Macklin and Montagu Jones, furnishes a taking opening melody, supplemented by a piquant alla trigane. "The Lodestar Valse," by Spencer Dickenson, is a dashing dance-piece, richly harmonised. Kathleen Doyle's "I Gathered a Rose," though without other distinguishing points, is graceful. "Love Ships," by Kitty Parker, furnishes a simple and attractive setting of a whimsical and poetic conceit. "Little Maid in Quaker Grey," by Henley Barber, lacks colour, but is simple and unaffected.

THE MUSICIANS.

The Musicians' Union of Australia held its annual conference in Adelaide during last week. A number of alterations were made in the rules, including the proposals made by N.S.W.—that applicants for membership from oversea should be subject to a residential qualification of six months, and an initiation fee of 20 guineas. This is subject to the jurisdiction of each State, and is not to be exercised unless there are a number of musicians out of employment. But, if employment is normal, applicants are to be allowed to join under ordinary conditions. It was resolved that each district must include in their rules the power to fix the minimum number of an orchestra in any place of amusement, this, of course, being subject to the control of the State or branch where the place of amusement is situated.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

THE BALKAN WAR.

There is little doubt that the Balkan war of 1912-1913 and the present world conflict are closely connected, though it will be for future historians to determine precisely how far the one was responsible for the other. It was Servia's hatred of Austria, accentuated by the latter's attitude during the intervention of the Powers, that guided the hand which slew Archduke Francis at Sarajevo, and as a consequence provided the spark for the tinder which set all Europe ablaze. But in the meantime the Balkan war seems curiously remote. Its battles and holocausts have been eclipsed by greater issues, and the belated "Inner History of the Balkan War," by Lieut.-Colonel Rankin, special correspondent of the "Times," will scarcely receive the attention it deserves. It is an excellent book, written without bias, and with an intimate knowledge of all the tortuous political intrigues, mutual jealousies, and antagonisms among the allies which marked the war at every stage of its progress right down to its conclusion.

The author devotes a chapter to a romantic figure, whose influence in bringing about the union of the Balkan States against their common foe, though not generally known, can hardly be exaggerated, according to Colonel Rankin. James David Bourchier might have stepped straight out of the pages of The Prisoner of Zenda. He is an Irishman, who, after a brilliant University career, both academic and athletic, became a master at Eton. Deafness compelled him to resign his position, and he was appointed representative of the "Times" in the Balkans. Like so many of his colleagues on that journal (Morrison, of Peking, and Sir Thomas Barclay, to mention only two), he went as a special correspondent and remained as political adviser. He soon became a power in the land. Now "he spends a vagrant bachelor life in a corner of Europe, to which he has become profoundly attached, and in which he pulls an incredible number of strings. He makes Sofia his headquarters, winters in Athens, spends the heat of the summer in Sinaia, and pays frequent visits to Bucharest and Belgrade. He was expelled from Bulgaria once during a political crisis, but was soon recalled, and the Greek press made bitter attacks upon him when, a few years ago, he began to point out the necessity of a Balkan alliance. Now he has the full confidence of every court in the Peninsula, and his advice is more eagerly sought by responsible Ministers and more frequently adopted than that of professional diplomatists." He used his powers wisely. His idea was nothing less than the uniting of the four Christian States in arms against the Mohammedan power; to fight for the religious and political liberties of their kinsmen subjects of that power. It was no easy thing to persuade them to sink their mutual rivalries in a common cause, but "this Bourchier deliberately set himself to do, and this he succeeded in doing."

However, perhaps just now there is more interest in the pictures the author gives of war in its various phases. At different times he was with the Bulgarian, Servian, Greek, and Turkish armies, and his vivid descriptions make us realise something of the infinitely greater drama which is now being played further north. He reached Sofia just before Kirk Kilisse, when Bulgaria had hurled every available man into the fighting line. "Sofia," he writes, "is not a city of the dead, but a city of those who have gone forth to die for her if need be; and the wide streets are silent and empty, and no children's voices echo across the deserted squares. For their fathers are gone away to fight the foe, and their children are all helping their mothers to fight another foe, poverty." In the shops diminutive urchins hardly out of the nursery were the "salesmen," in the clubs and restaurants small boys not yet in their 'teens were the waiters and attendants. To-day there must be many a Sofia in Europe. Then came the news of the victory at Kirk Kilisse. All afternoon there was a feeling of suspense in the air; the deserted streets began to fill, and the silent groups all gravitated by a common impulse towards the Press Agency. "Suddenly a roar of cheering broke out, and, as the news flew from mouth to mouth, the whole city vibrated from end to end with a storm of hurrahs. Kirk Kilisse had fallen, and the keen wits of the Bulgarians realised that the key to Adrianople was theirs. Moreover, it was the first victory the Bulgars had ever gained over the Turks, and in the popular imagination it seemed a certain augury of the ultimate success of their country's arms. That was a tremendous evening. There was no riotous mafficking, but every man, woman, and child in Sofia turned laughing, cheering, and handshaking into the streets, and the bells of the churches rang, and lights gleamed in every window. Opposite my hotel a group took up the National Anthem." The same enthusiasm and the same fortitude was shown by the Servians, who are now manfully resisting the Austrian attack. It was in Servia that so many women enlisted. The author met the first of these, a comely girl, who resembled nothing less than an Amazon, and has since married a comrade in the camp and field.

Colonel Rankin found that the special correspondent receives a very doubtful welcome in modern war. He wanted to get to Adrianople, but was stopped long before he reached his goal because the Bulgarian troops were getting into position. "This was our first intimation that the old business of war correspondence was at an end. It was something of a shock. Here were we, having travelled thousands of miles, and spent hundreds of pounds on our paper's account, within ten miles of an epoch-making siege, yet forbidden to travel those last essential kilometres! The unqualified success of the Bulgarian demarche in preventing the leakage of information valuable to the enemy, has undoubtedly established a precedent which will be followed in all future wars. The war correspondent, as we have known him, is no more. Fuit Carthago. News will be got, of course, but probably it will be done by an elaborate system of smuggled despatches from educated privates in the trenches, whose patriotism is not impervious to cash." And again, "It was part of the deliberate policy of the Bulgars, part of that reasoned and consistent theory of warfare which raised them at one blow to the position of a first-rate military Power, to maintain absolute secrecy on all matters, the publication of which might prejudice their fighting efficiency. No lists of dead and wounded were ever issued; mothers and wives only knew that their sons and husbands would never come back to them again because of a scrawl from a comrade who saw his comrade fall." We see that in this war the lesson has been taken to heart by the belligerents. The war correspondent has found that, to all intents and purposes, his occupation has gone. The French Government publishes no list of casualties, and will tell relations the bare facts of death or injury without the place or date or any of the circumstances thereof.

In view of the doubt which surrounds the intentions of Turkey in the present war, it is interesting to note that throughout the Balkan war Turkey looked upon Germany as her diplomatic champion—a feeling which Germany reciprocated. Lieut.-Colonel Rankin quotes an "inspired" article in the "Vossische Zeitung," by its correspondent at Constantinople. "It has been once more shown," he writes, "that in all serious epochs Turkey possesses only one absolutely disinterested friend, viz., Germany, and those who stand closest to affairs know that it is only through Germany, which in this case has decisively influenced the policy of the Triple Alliance, that Turkey has been saved from the shameful and injurious intervention of the Powers, and Germany has been prevented from rendering more far-reaching services only by unavoidable consideration for the other group of Powers, or by the interests of her own allies." However, it remains to be seen whether Turkey's gratitude to Germany is sufficient to make her abandon her policy of neutrality; however eager she may be to do so, she cannot forget that action on her part would bring into being another Balkan alliance. The war of 1912-1913 would be fought all over again, and on this occasion Turkey, if defeated, would not receive such lenient treatment. Disappearance from Europe would probably be the price she had to pay for her intervention. (Constable.)

MARRIAGE IN MOROCCO.

Twenty years ago Professor Edward Westermarck wrote his monumental "History of Human Marriage," which still remains the supreme authority on the subject. However, the author considers that it contains a serious omission. It devoted but one short chapter to wedding ceremonies, and Professor Westermarck declares that he almost entirely failed to recognise their magical significance. "Marriage ceremonies in Morocco" repairs this omission. It is the fruits of six years spent among Berber and Arab tribes, far from civilisation. The author tells us that he gathered his information by attending weddings, either as an invited guest or as a spectator in disguise, and, though he says nothing about this, his inquiry must often have involved a great deal of personal risk. However, he must feel that his labour has been well repaid, for he has achieved a most comprehensive knowledge of the manners and customs of these people, and has collected a body of material which will lay anthropologists under a lasting debt to him.

The Moors, like many other primative races, seem to regard sex with a certain amount of fear, and they see in the union of man and woman an occasion for malign influences to accomplish their fell work. The marital relation is harmful unless it is entered into under the protection of certain ceremonies, and magic is called into play "to neutralise the dangers supposed to be connected with all contact between man and woman and with the state of marriage itself, as also to make the union safe, prosperous, and happy." To defeat the sinister machinations of the jinns both the bridegroom and the bride are daubed with henna, which is believed to possess "baraka" (the blessing of Allah), and to act as a preventive of black magic. The bride is dressed as a man, and the groom as a woman in order to confuse the jinns, who, for all their power, are credited with little discrimination. The groom's friends try to frighten them away by fusillades of gun fire, while the women on all possible occasions make a "quivering" noise with their tongue which is supposed to have the same effect. Indeed, one might go on quoting indefinitely from the curious superstitions described by Professor Westermarck.

However, he does not confine his inquiries to the actual ceremony of marriage; he has much to say of its preliminaries and its sequels as well. Matches are always "arranged" in Morocco, sometimes by the parents, sometimes by an intermediary or broker, who, for some mysterious reason, is usually the family barber. In some tribes the father actually sells his daughter; in none have the young people any say in the matter. However, if the lady dislikes her prospective spouse she can always avoid betrothal by the simple device of "making use of bad or ominous words or behaving like a woman at a funeral"—scratching her face, for instance, or covering herself with cow-dung. The affair is at once "off," because after this the marriage would be unlucky. There are other quaint customs, whose object is to decide which of the happy couple shall rule. We throw shoes after the departing pair; the Berbers hurl slippers at each other, in order to decide which of the two shall be the dominant partner in the house. In some tribes the bride's father chooses a large ram for the feast, and the bride rides on it, boxing its ears vigorously, in order to establish her ascendancy over her husband. Her mother then picks out its right eye with a needle, dries it, pounds it, and mixes it with the food provided at the feast, so that the bridegroom's family may look upon the bride in a favourable light. Among many of the tribes divorce is an extremely free and easy business; indeed the system must be a very inconvenient one from the man's point of view. A lady can be divorced and remarried on the same day, and she can select her new husband quite without regard to his feelings in the matter. All she has to do is to leave her husband's home and go to another man's home, where she embraces the pole supporting the roof, or begins to turn a small hand-mill. The owner of the house or the mill has to marry her, and pay a large sum to the ex-husband. The alternatives are troublesome and expensive, and in any case the man who refuses matrimony in these circumstances is regarded with immense contempt by his fellows. Sometimes, indeed, a bloodthirsty war is the consequence of such a refusal. Professor Westermarck mentions the pathetic case of "an old man of good family who had been compelled to marry three runaways." The book is full of curious information, and though anthropologists will, of course, be best able to appreciate its merits, the layman will find much to interest him in these pages. BRANDES ON NIETZSCHE.

Dr George Brandes, the Danish litterateur, was the first critic in Europe to recognise the greatness of Nietzsche. In 1888 he published an essay, which still remains the sanest introduction to his work, and this led to a "literary friendship" between the two, which endured until the final eclipse. Already Nietzsche had shown symptoms of mental instability. He suffered from a kind of megalomania: in his last book but one he had said, "I have given the Germans the profoundest book they possess." In his last book he had said, "I have given mankind the profoundest book it possesses." A few weeks before mental death overtook him he wrote to a friend declaring that he intended to summon a meeting of sovereigns in Rome to have the young German Emperor shot. This was signed Nietzsche-Caesar, while the final letter Dr. Brandes ever received from him, unstamped, undated, written in a large hand on a piece of paper ruled in pencil, such as children use, bore the signature, "The Crucified." It was thus evident, writes Dr. Brandes, "that this great mind in its final megalomania oscillated between attributing to itself the two greatest names in history so strongly contrasted."

This correspondence, together with several essays on the subject of Nietzsche's teaching and influence have now been published for the first time. Dr. Brandes makes a vigorous assault upon Herr Nordau, because the latter "has attempted with incredible coarseness to brand Nietzsche's whole life work as the production of a madman." Certainly in these letters, with the exception of that last sad one from the darkness, there is nothing to suggest any lack of balance. They deal with matters of literary interest, they express his pleasure at the prospect of more general recognition, and his delight at the success of Brandes' lectures upon him at St. Petersburg. In fact, they are just the sort of letters that an author might be expected to write to a sympathetic and appreciative admirer. The book is an interesting one, which every student of Nietzsche should read. (Heinemann.)

FOR THE YOUNG.

It is not so very long ago since geography was simply a matter of rivers and towns, and history a matter of dates and names, so that no self-respecting child ever dreamed of reading either out of school. However, times have changed. A race of writers has arisen who know how to cover the powder of instruction with the jam of entertainment, and thanks to their efforts the younger generation is beginning to realise that the adventures of great men in the past are just as thrilling as those of Deadwood Dick, or Frank Reade, or any other idol of our childhood. The dry-as-dust manual has disappeared, and has been replaced by books wherein history is made an actual living thing instead of a dreary record. Some recent publications of Harrap and Co. are excellent examples of this. For instance, "The Threshold of History," by H. R. Hall, deals with the life of man in the British Isles in the dim days before the dawn of history. It shows how a nomad race of hunters gradually built houses, evolved a rude agriculture, began to trade among themselves by barter, learned how to make pottery for their simple needs, and slowly climbed the ladder of civilisation until the fear of an outside foe brought them together into the primitive community which was the germ of the nation. Mr. Hall introduces a personal touch into his narrative, which makes it the more vivid. His characters all have names and distinct individualities. Every new development is identified with some actual person: thus we are told "how Bran made a hoe and used it," or how Biora, the potter, produced wares greatly in request because she had accidentally discovered the secret of firing the clay. And hence Mr. Hall's flesh and blood realities appeal to the young reader in a manner which anonymous abstractions would fail to do. There is also a "Heroes of All Time" series, in which Mr. E. M. Wilmot Buxton writes of Jeanne D'Arc, Miss Beatrice Marshall of Sir Walter Raleigh, courtier, adventurer, and litterateur, and Miss Alice Birkhead of Marie Antoinette, whose splendid conduct at her death atoned for all the frivolity and futility of her previous life, and entitled her to a place on the roll of heroines.

In "The Conquerors of Mexico" Mr. Henry Gilbert tells us again of that wonderful drama in which "Stout Cortes" and his little band of conquistadores played so heroic a part. They came from overseas with cross and sword to convert the "savages"; they found the brilliant Aztec civilisation, with its wonderful cities set in lakes, its unheard-of wealth, its terrible religious rites. For a space they triumphed, and even the great Montezuma had to bend his knee before these invincible strangers. But Cortes himself profited little by his exploits. Poverty-stricken and neglected, he dragged out the remaining years of his life in a mean village near Seville, and it was left for another generation to recognise his achievements. Mr. Gilbert has based his book principally upon Prescott's famous history, and he has reproduced the fascinating story in a form acceptable to juvenile readers.

In "Stories from Robert Browning," V. Cameron Turnbull endeavours to do for that poet what Charles Lamb did for Shakespeare. The stories are classified according to the subject—into groups of tragedies, classic tales, peasant tales, stories of animals, and so forth. The author's object is to persuade younger folk to read the poems for themselves, and this they will be more likely to do if he is presented to them as neither singer nor preacher, but merely as a teller of tales. For this reason the poems here retold have been chosen solely for their vivid narrative interest. (Harrap and Co.)

In a somewhat different vein, but equally instructive and entertaining, is "Pets for Boys and Girls," by Mr. Frank Townend Barton. Here the author discusses various pets on which children are wont to lavish an almost parental devotion, tells anecdotes about them, and gives hints on their management. His choice of subjects is catholic. Dogs and cats naturally take pride of place, but at the other end of the scale come frogs, lizards, toads, and such like creepy things. Apparently there are children who can find a soft place in their hearts even for snakes; at any rate, the author includes them in his survey, and recommends a diet of minced raw meat and bread and milk. There are two chapters, however, which the Australian youth will regard as somewhat superfluous; they deal with the care and breeding of rabbits. (Jarrold and Sons.)

A book that every Australian boy, and, indeed, every Australian girl, would rejoice to possess is "The Wonder Book of Soldiers." This is a most admirable publication for those who wish to know how the military forces of the Empire live and move and have their being; how they work, how they play, how they prepare themselves in peace for the mighty test of war. There are accounts of their organisation, their uniforms, and their history. There is a special chapter devoted to the Australian citizen army, and a number of articles dealing with various phases of modern warfare. The volume is copiously illustrated, and is likely to be enormously successful. (Ward, Lock, and Co.)

SOME NEW NOVELS.

Not long ago Mr. J. D. Beresford made his debut as a novelist with "Goslings," a book which struck an original note and set readers on the watch for new work from his pen. "The House in Demetrius Road" justifies all expectations, for if in "Goslings" Mr. Beresford acknowledged a spiritual debt to Mr. H. G. Wells, in this book he is himself and no one else. Moreover, he has proved that he is already one of the contemporary novelists who really count. The plot is of the smallest; the characters of any importance whatever are only three in number; yet out of this exiguous material the author has evolved a psychological drama of enthralling interest. It is a study of the conflict between will and emotion. The theme is not a pleasant one; its treatment deserves that much abused adjective powerful. The three actors are Robin Greg, a brilliant Scotsman, with political ambitions and a dipsomaniac; Margaret, the sister of his dead wife, and Martin Bond, his secretary. Bond comes to Demetrius Road, and though he at once is conscious of a peculiar sinister atmosphere about the house, it is some time before he realises what is wrong. The awakening is a rude one, but henceforth he and Margaret become allies in the attempt to save Greg from himself. At first they seem to be successful, and in their uphill fight they are drawn closer and closer to one another. But they come to the parting of the ways, for Greg wishes to marry Margaret, and though she knows that her heart is not hers to give she feels impelled to make that sacrifice because in this alone Greg's hope of salvation lies. Meanwhile he has suspected the truth, and half-way through his "cure" he relapses. In a bitter denunciation of his helpers he attributes this to their treachery, although treachery there was none. We feel, however, that he is simply seizing upon the excuse as the pretext for further indulgence. The end is somewhat inconclusive. Bond and Margaret are turned out of the house, while Greg remains alone with his enemy; he has opened the door to their happiness, but it will be a happiness poisoned by the thought that if he drinks himself to death it will be their fault. The strength of the book lies in its vivid presentation of the emotional crises through which these three people pass. We see Bond, an inexperienced boy, become a man under the influence of responsibility combined with love. We see the self-reliant Margaret keyed up to make the supreme sacrifice, yet half reluctantly welcoming the opportunity to shift her burden to stronger shoulders; and we see Greg himself a revolting, yet pathetic, object, lose the one sheet anchor of his wayward life through no one's fault but his own, and maliciously exulting in his own degradation, so that he can leave a rankling wound in their bliss. (Heinemann; G. Robertson.)

Mrs. Katherine Tynan is perhaps better known for her verse than her prose, but "Lovers' Meetings" shows that she is thoroughly at home in the latter medium. The book consists of a number of short stories on most diverse subjects, but alike in this, that they are all irradiated by a tenderness of feeling and a sympathetic insight which make them pleasant to read. As the title indicates, they all deal with love in one or other of its phases, and their interest lies in emotion rather than in incident. Among the most successful are those in which the unseen and the supernatural play a part. In "The Little Ghost," for instance, a tale of exquisite pathos, we are told of a girl who goes out to marry her lover in India, and finds him dead. Her grief and despair know no bounds until the "little ghost" comes to comfort her. However, the pathetic is not the only note which Miss Tynan strikes. Sometimes though sorrow endure for a night, joy cometh in the morning, as in "A Night Journey," where a lonely young governess, dismissed from her employment for a cheaper article, and a lonely man each find the love which had hitherto passed them by. And humour is represented also as in "The Gentleman in Possession," a delightfully told episode in the life of an artist and his young wife. But whatever the author's theme, it is treated with the delicacy of touch and charm of manner which render these stories wholly acceptable. (T. Werner Laurie.)

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

"A Woman's Letter from London" under date July 31, comments on the theatre as follows:—"Yesterday I went to see 'Monna Vanna' played by the official permission of the Lord Chamberlain. 'A step forward' so it is claimed by the Independent Theatre and its supporters. In this drama Maeterlinck for years drew a sort of uproar from the press because of the Lady Godiva motif in it. Monna Vanna, to save the city of Pisa from starvation, agrees to go to the tent of the attacking general, clad only in her mantle. The sacrifice implied of her does not take place. She goes against her husband's commands, but she finds in Prinzivalli, who has laid siege to Pisa, a boy-lover of her own. But as presented yesterday, the mantle question was lost sight of. Miss Constance Collier, who played Monna Vanna, appeared in the tent in a long flowing robe with sleeves of the Venetian type, more like a modern rest gown than anything else. Very beautiful, a little transparent, but very little; there seemed nothing in it. Her mantle was of green, which she discarded during the act. I have seen far more suggestive scenes played in bedrooms any time during the last three years, when bedrooms and marital drama have been very common. There is always in Maeterlinck's work much that is tender and delicate. I would prefer to see this drama acted in French or Italian. To get the quality of the 15th century Italian period is difficult in the English prose, and from English actors. Mr. J. T. Grein has worked for years to get Monna Vanna on to our stage openly, and I agree so refined a work should have its place. But there is much in it that is dull and 'talky.' Too much so for a drama dealing with a starving garrison and the pressure of siege. An an opera I can conceive this work as 'immense,' and I hope someone will do it." It may be added that "Monna Vanna" has long been played in the United States. Nance O'Neill had it in her repertoire in 1901, but the late J. C. Williamson would not allow her to play it.

Mr. W. T. Pullen, of Woolgoolga, is interestingly reminiscent in a letter to the editor of the "Herald." "No doubt you will wonder when I tell you that I knew Vincent Wallace over 70 years ago. He was in the orchestra of the old Victoria Theatre, when John Gibbs was the leader. I also knew his wife, Mrs. Wallace. She was on the stage at the same time under Mr. Lazar. I was at the uncovering of the Governor Bourke statue by Governor Gipps, and it was after that I knew Mr. and Mrs. Wallace." The veteran writer's memory takes him, indeed, a long way back. Wallace left Dublin some time in 1835 for Sydney, where he lived up country for a while, and then gave a concert at the request of Lieutenant-General Governor Sir Richard Bourke (who retired in December, 1837), on February 12, 1836. He then settled in Sydney as a teacher, and as "Leader of the Anacreontic Society and Professor of Composition of the Royal Society" (!). Wallace did not stay here long, but went on to New Zealand, and reached London in 1845, and at once composed "Maritana." Though then early in his twenties, he was married, but not to a professional singer, and Mr. Pullen has confused the two ladies as the one he heard at the Victoria Theatre (opened 1838), was the composer's sister, who figured as an operatic prima donna in Sydney. She married Mr John Bushell, senior, a basso of this city, and on his death she went to England as a youthful widow, and sang the role of Maritana there and in America. She returned to Sydney in 1864 as Mme. Wallace-Bushelle, and taught here for many years. Her son, John Bushelle, was a fine basso cantante, still well remembered. Sydney's first statue, the one which dates Mr. Pullen's acquaintance with the Wallaces, was unveiled by Sir George Gipps on April 12, 1842.

Mr. W. H. Rawlins plays as Baron Dauvray, a character in "The Girl in the Taxi," a part as important as that of Pomarel (C. H. Workman), and, indeed, the success of the new musical farce is due to the distribution of a particularly strong comic interest between six actors, who revolve, more or less, round Suzanne. Mr. Rawlins has been on the stage since his schooldays in Durham, when his parents, who lived in Newcastle-on-Tyne, were friendly with the manager of the Theatre Royal there. In this way young Rawlins started early, and after various preliminary experiences, toured the United Kingdom for three years and a half in "Les Cloches de Corneville." Shiel Barry, the original old Gaspard in the two years' run in London, headed the touring company, in which Mr. Rawlins played first Gobo (the Shadow), and then the Bailey (the Substance). "Les Cloches" toured continuously for seven years, and was probably the most successful French comic opera ever produced in England. The young actor was then engaged for low comedy in "Madame Favart," Uncle Mat in "La Cigale," and was then at Daly's Theatre in "The Geisha," "San Toy," and "The Greek Slave," which last, though it never reached Australia, he considers the best of the three. Mr. Rawlins created a fine part at the London Gaiety in "My Girl," and then remained with the George Edwardes companies on tour, and sometimes in London, for 22 years. He played in "See See," the piece being the one in which Lily Elsie made her name. Her subsequent success was founded upon her talent for emotional expression—she felt all that she said or sang. Later, he was the Nish on tour to her "Merry Widow," and he was in "The Dollar Princess" in London, besides playing pantomime Dames and Barons in pantomime for the annual Christmas seasons. Mr. Rawlins' last part in England before joining the J. C. Williamson company for Australia was as Will Atkins in "Robinson Crusoe" at Bristol, and the manager (Mr. John Hart) has an option on his services for the same piece at Leeds next Christmas, and at Manchester for the end of 1915. Mr. Rawlins will probably be released from the Leeds engagement, as he is very pleased with his Australian experiences, and is enjoying the sunshine and open-air life round about Rose Bay.

It frequently happens that the untrammelled gossipy opinions of private correspondents on the European theatre possess a more vivid interest than anything that can be read in the London newspapers, and this has been exemplified in the various letters written for this column by H. N. Southwell, and in the communications from Wilfred Burns-Walker. The latter was near Capetown on July 24, and from on board the Dunluce Castle he makes voluminous comment upon his London and Paris experiences. In London he thoroughly enjoyed "The Land of Promise" (Irene Vanbrugh and Godfrey Tearle), Marie Tempest in "The Duke of Killiecrankie," Cyril Maude in "Grumpy," and Lydia Yavorska in "Camille." Per contra, the Australian baritone was bored almost to extinction by Pygmalion, at Her Majesty's, "with Tree at his worst, and Mrs. Pat Campbell completely out of her element as the coster-girl Eliza Doolittle." In opera, he was most impressed by "Aida," with Mme. Destinn in the name-part, with a rich, luscious voice, "human in every tone, and ringing through every corner of Covent Garden, united with the most powerful acting to be seen on the operatic stage." The traveller considers her the finest artist of all now before the public. Mme. D' Alvarez, a new mezzo-soprano from La Scala and New York, "a magnificent looking woman, with a glorious voice, made a sensation on her debut as Amneris; with Martinelli as Radames and Gilly as the baritone—both great singers. Besides "Louise," Boito's "Mephistophele" and Debussy's "Pelleas et Melisande," Mr. Walker saw "Don Giovanni," and admired Maggie Teyte, "a soprano with not a large voice, but exquisitely dainty in the charm of her vocal style." Later, he saw her in Paris as "Mignon," and found that her rare artistic value was thoroughly appreciated in the French capital, as it certainly had not been in London. He heard Caruso, and remarks, "He is not now equal to at least three of the younger tenors I heard." In the concert room, he was struck by the American soprano Alma Gluck, "a very fine singer of the Dolores type, recently married to Zimbalist, the violin player." Crossing again to Paris, the baritone sang once more for the Duchesse D' Uzes, and was invited to join various guests of Prince Charles de Bourbon at the wonderful 'Jewel Ball' given by the Princesse de Broglie, one of the most marvellous social events in Paris since the days of the Second Empire." At the Paris opera he saw "Samson and Dalila," with the famous orchestra of 120, and "Un Ballo," with Mme. De Cisneros brilliantly tragic as Ulrica. As regards Australian artists, Mr. Burns-Walker spent an afternoon at the beautiful home of Ada Crossley (Mrs. Muecke) in St. John's Wood, and also called on Mme. Amy Sherwin, looking wonderfully well and happy. A few days after posting this enthusiastic account of his sight-seeing, the baritone was hard at work in his studio at Johannesburg.

MENDELISM, EVOLUTION, RELIGION.

(BY REV. DR. ROSEBY, F.R.A.S.)

If the most dramatic feature of this Australian meeting of the British Association has been, as some think, the production of the Darling Downs skull, assuredly the feature about the congress of deepest scientific interest has been Professor Bateson's presidential address. I refer, of course, to the address as a whole, including the portion of it delivered in Melbourne. It is a matter of curious interest to note that this great scientific discovery, Mendelism, was made by an Austrian abbot experimenting in his cloister garden, mostly with the common pea, science in this case being indebted for one of its primary discoveries to a representative of religion. The bibliography of Mendelism shows how much its study and exposition are due to the distinguished president of the present congress. It is to be remembered, however, that, though Mendel's discovery was made nearly fifty years ago, it remained neglected and almost unnoticed till the beginning of this century. The work upon it is therefore so recent that, as Professor Bateson acknowledges, it is much too early to claim for it any finality, and its due, its proportionate place and value in the many-sided discussion of evolution has yet to be assigned. Of its great importance there can be no question, and its fairly unanimous acceptance by biologists, with the added support that Weismannism gives to one of its central principles—the non-inheritance generally of acquired characters—makes it necessary, in any theory of evolution, to take full account of it.

But already the vast amount of experiment—some of it perplexing enough—and the wide range of controversy to which the subject has given rise, show also how necessary it is to be patient, and to restrain that restive temper which the "hearing and telling of any new thing" is apt to arouse to-day, as in the Areopagus of St. Paul's famous sermon of long ago.

It is necessary to notice that the rather severe criticism of Darwin's evolutionary theory by Professor Bateson is not shared by a large body of scientific men whose judgment is not inferior, in such a matter, to his own. To cite an easy but decisive proof of this: If one turns to the scientific articles in the recently published eleventh edition of the "Encyclopaedia Britannica" it will be found that, with hardly an exception, the evolutionary theory, as commonly understood, on its biological side, is steadfastly maintained. It is treated, indeed, no longer as a subject of controversy, but as a matter of established certainty. To put Darwin, therefore, in this regard, as Professor Bateson does, almost on the same level with Lucretius, will, one ventures to think, rather startle the general feeling of such scientific men as happen to know Lucretius.

In regard to Mendelism, there exists no such practical unanimity. Of course, the experimental facts speak for themselves. They are within a wide range easily tested, easily verified, and, generally, not insecurely interpreted. But if Professor Bateson must be acknowledged as one of the greatest authorities here, it must not be forgotten that there are other authorities who widely differ from him; and we laymen must be allowed to collate these differing judgments, and in the last resort to use our own. One of these authorities, it so happens, is the president of the zoological section in the present congress—Professor Dendy, D.Sc., F.R.S., a man who won his spurs, we may note with some pride, as Sir Ernest Rutherford did, in the sister Dominion of New Zealand. And it is interesting to notice that while Professor Bateson, on the one hand, makes scornful reference to a member of the Royal Society who endeavoured to show, in a way "which would have delighted Dr. Pangloss himself," how, on the Darwinian principle of the survival of the fittest, the chasm was probably actually bridged between the next lower forms of animal life and the mammals, Professor Dendy, on the other hand, treats with equal scorn the idea of Professor Lotsy, who, on strict Mendelian principles, "lately informed us that all species arise by crossing, and seriously suggested that the vertebrate type arose by the crossing of two invertebrates!" We who are only onlookers at this pretty game as it stands may be excused for reserving our judgment as to its issue.

But now for the last point to be considered—the bearing of all this upon the question of our generally-accepted morality and of our religion. It is here that a great number of us will either refuse to follow the distinguished president, or only consent to follow him at a distance.

Let us anyhow distinctly recognise what the questions at issue are. The idea and purpose of the "Blue Book" recently issued by the Royal Commission under Hon. Dr. Mackellar are, according to Professor Bateson, a mistake and a futility. Some concession is indeed made to the special circumstances of communities where, "for some temporary reason, non restriction may be permissible. "But as a rule, four children (or less) are "sufficient." In that case, of course, our criticism of this world-wide tendency to what some have even described as "race suicide" is simply error and folly. We are not discussing this issue; we are only desirous of making the issue clear. Either Dr. Bateson is here in the wrong track, or our moral and religious teachers are.

But more than this. The chasm widens and deepens. There is a certain measure of agreement among thoughtful and reasonable men on the subject of "the propagation of the unfit." The mentally defective, even "the definitely feeble-minded," may wisely be subjected to legal restraint. But "these social vermin" is a strong term to apply to those whose only fault is their misfortune. And the suggestion that medical men make a mistake in interfering too eagerly to save the life of the hopelessly-undesirable is felt by Dr. Bateson, as he offers it, to raise perplexing, though, as he affirms, not insuperable, difficulties. They chiefly arise, he says, from undue deference to "the legal mind," which he markedly disparages, and from "occult views" of life, which can hardly refer to any but those "collectively" associated with religion.

But the dangerous crevasse here is in the distinction the president makes between "Bohemianism" and "those social vermin." The arts and sciences (he says)—so runs the story, "which may very well be the truth"—came in direct descent from Cain, "while the irreproachable Seth was a nomen nudum." Now, that there is a large measure of truth here, will be admitted by all reasonable men. "The catholicity of Shakespeare's mind," in such a racial selection as Professor Bateson is here discussing is something in which we should all concur. But it is easy to see the abuse to which Professor Bateson's suggestions are liable. Feeble-mindedness in this matter is a bar, but evil character is not. How easily the libertine may accentuate the distinction, and shelter himself under cover of it!

Professor Bateson's references to ancient Greece and its physiological wreckage, to the English House of Lords, and generally to the perils to which society is exposed from the rule of the common people, are rather discouraging reading to those who think that class distinctions are over-accentuated in our modern life. And, as this is common ground, where the lay mind may fully express itself, we are under no obligation to let it pass unchallenged. Surely the decisive answer to it is that the higher type, the man of genius if you will, of whom Dr. Bateson and all of us are in quest, is just as often found outside "the phratries and gentes" as in them. It is a common platitude to treat this as something wonderful. On Mendelian principles Dr. Bateson treats it as an anomaly. It is no anomaly. It is a matter of very common experience.

For the rest, there are expressions throughout the address, sporadic, and often obscure, which seem to hint at larger freedom in human conduct arising out of man's deliverance from "superstition," "mythical ideas, mysticism," which seem to imply more than they express. Many of us will heartily rejoice with Professor Bateson, that a dark eschatology and a ferocious moral code are passing. But he continues: "Man has great powers of enjoyment if he does not deliberately forego them." With freer and simpler conceptions of life and death, men will "get more out of this world." We can put a construction upon these phrases which is consistent with religious faith. Did Professor Bateson mean no more?

Anyhow, it is not difficult to see how the phrases can be understood, and will by many be grossly distorted to mean that we need not trouble about any other world than this, and that as men grow wiser they will set themselves to have a good time here. Let us gather and pluck the grape of enjoyment. The kill-joy element of religion will be as an unhappy dream when one awaketh. One may gravely suggest this is hardly the message that Australia needs to-day. One would gladly have welcomed, in this exposition of Mendelism, some hint that its acceptance is not unfavourable to what, for the last 1900 years, has been one great factor, anyhow, in the evolution of mankind—the voice of duty, "stern daughter of the voice of God,"—and the sacred sanctions and uplifting dynamic of religious faith.

THE CHURCHES.

SUNDAY SCHOOL OF THE FUTURE.

Dr. W. F. Adeney, principal of the Lancashire Congregational College, and a well-known theological writer, delivered an address on Thursday night at the Congregational School Hall, on the subject of the "Sunday School of the Future."

Dr. Adeney said that the phrase implied that there would be Sunday schools in the future, and that perhaps that they would need to be somewhat different from those of to-day. He pointed out that if the Sunday school flagged, the Church would also flag. The Sunday school was the great feeder of the Church; and if they could only hold the children, it would solve the problem of empty pews. He had found that in many instances that attempts had been made to make the scholar fit the lesson, instead of the lesson being chosen to suit the capacity of the child.

It was a very great mistake that a more careful selection of Sunday school teachers was not made. The Education Departments trained their teaching staff, and in like manner the Sunday school teacher should be adapted for and capable of carrying on the work. The gift of teaching was not given to all people; but, they did not desire to lose the young enthusiasts on that account. They must not let them drift away; and in order to hold them to the Church the speaker advocated that the system in vogue in America for the training of the young aspirants should be adopted.

In that country the higher branch of the Sunday school was known as the institute, and boys and girls pass automatically from the elementary classes to the senior divisions. In order to carry this into effect, it would be necessary to provide accommodation in future school buildings; and if they had graded schools they must have graded lessons.

SCRIPTURES FOR THE TROOPS.

Following the usual custom of the British and Foreign Bible Society, the committee in New South Wales has arranged that every soldier leaving the State shall receive, if he will accept it, a copy of the New Testament. Already over 2000 copies have been distributed, and arrangements have been made to supply the Randwick camp next Monday. The other camps will be visited in turn. The book is strongly bound, with limp cover, and good clear tpye, and bears the inscription, "Presented by the committee of the New South Wales auxiliary, British and Foreign Bible Society."

The secretary expresses appreciation of the kindly manner in which the work of distribution has been facilitated by the officers commanding the various brigades.

The Archbishop of Brisbane is returning to Australia by the Themistocles, which is due at Melbourne on October 7.

The death of Rev. Samuel Lewis, curate in the parish of Holy Trinity, Orange, occurred this week. Towards the close of the mission recently held at Orange, Mr. Lewis contracted pneumonia.

Rev. Charles Hudson, chaplain of the Naval Depot at Williamstown, Victoria, has been appointed chaplain of the hospital ship connected with the Australian Fleet. Mr. Hudson was formerly vicar of Coburg, and worked for many years in the diocese of Ballarat.

Dean Stephen, Bishop-Elect of Tasmania, formally resigned his office as Dean of Melbourne last Monday. He will leave for Sydney on September 17, and will be consecrated in St. Andrew's Cathedral on St. Matthew's Day (September 21). A meeting of the Chapter of St. Paul's Cathedral, Melbourne, will soon be held for the purpose of appointing his successor.

Anniversary services were held at St. Mark's Church of England, Lilyfield, on Sunday last, Bishop Stonewigg officiating in the morning, and the Rev. W. J. Cakebread, of St. Jude's, Randwick, in the evening.

Dr. Digges La Touche, diocesan missioner, and Rev. S. E. Maxted, Rector of Haberfield (both of the diocese of Sydney) have resigned their positions, and are going to the front with the Australian troops. Mr. Maxted has joined the Army Medical Corps.

Mr. R. Atkins, diocesan registrar, has been presented by the Archbishop and clerical and lay members of the diocese of Sydney with an illuminated address to mark their good wishes of his 60 years' service in the diocesan registry.

Dr. Crossley, who last year resigned the bishopric of Auckland, owing to ill-health, has been appointed by the Bishop of Llandaff to the rectory of St. Andrew Major, near Cardiff.

The Rev. Chas. Sheldon will leave Auckland by the Makura next Wednesday on his return to the United States.

Dr. O'Connor, Bishop of Armidale, returned home last Sunday. He has visited Brisbane, Tweed Heads, Lismore, and Casino and attended the solemn obsequies on the death of the Pope.

Dr. Dunne, Roman Catholic Bishop of Wilcannia, will be 68 years of age on the 21st inst. He has spent 44 years in missionary work in Australia, and celebrated the 27th anniversary of his episcopal consecration in Broken Hill recently.

The Sacred Heart Church, Tuggranong, has recently been enlarged, and in the presence of a large and representative gathering of Catholics the church was solemnly blessed and opened on Sunday last by Father E. McGrath. Upwards of £70 was subscribed at the gathering, which will considerably reduce debt incurred by the additions.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of Australia will meet in Brisbane on Wednesday, September 23. The Rev. Dr. Davidson, of Adelaide, is Moderator-elect. Professor Rentoul, of Melbourne, the present Moderator, will preach.

The Moderator of the State General Assembly, the Rev. J. H. Terras, has arranged an itinerary for the month of October, in which he will visit many charges in the west.

It is understood that the Rev. John M'Kenzie, of St. Andrew's, Christchurch (N.Z.), has accepted the call to the Presbyterian charge at Toorak, Melbourne, rendered vacant by the recent death of the Rev. J. F. Macrae.

The Rev. James Henry, of Burghead, Scotland, who is on his way to Maclean, Clarence River, to take charge of the congregation in that town in connection with the Free Presbyterian Church of Australia, is now in Sydney.

The Rev. F. Colwell, president of the Methodist Conference, assisted by the Rev. W. G. Taylor, of the Central Methodist Mission, Sydney, presided over a convention of the presidents on Tuesday afternoon in Orange. The ministers of the district and office-bearers attended in large number, and the evening session was very fully attended. The Rev. J. W. Collier, the minister at Orange, also assisted. The Rev. F. Colwell left on Wednesday morning to assist in a similar gathering there on Thursday.

The Rev. John Hulme, organising secretary of the Methodist Church Centenary Fund, recently returned from a three months' visitation of a number of circuits on the North Coast. Mr. Hulme reports that he found both ministers and people in cordial sympathy with the objects of the fund, and that a very generous response was made on its behalf. During the next month Moruya and other South Coast districts are to be visited by the secretary.

The Rev. H. Clark has accepted a unanimous call to the charge of the Wellington Baptist Church. The Rev. James Barker will be inducted into the charge of the Katoomba Baptist Church on Sunday next.

The Baptist Union annual assembly will commence its sittings on September 16.

Owing to the war, the Australasian Christian Endeavour Convention, which it was intended to hold in Sydney at the end of this month, has been postponed. The step was reluctantly taken by the committee, but it was recognised that the best interests of the movement would best be served by postponing the fixture. It was decided to substitute for the big convention the 23rd annual convention of the New South Wales Christian Endeavour Union, which will be held from the 23rd to the 28th inst., the original programme being modified.

The annual meeting of the ladies' auxiliary to the London Missionary Society was held on Tuesday last in the presence of a large gathering. The president, Mrs. Austin, M.A., was in the chair, and addresses descriptive of their work were delivered by Miss Rivett, M.A., of Calcutta, and Mrs. Stuckey, M.A., of Peking. Encouraging reports were presented by the secretary and treasurer.

The Sydney City Mission has taken possession of the new premises at 276 Elizabeth-street, and the first meeting was held last week, when Mr. Noble gave an interesting address on "Science in its application to modern inventions." The meetings, which were held till lately in the Nithsdale-street Hall, are now transferred to the Elizabeth-street hall. There is ample accommodation provided for the mission.

The Rev. J. W. Jones, superintendent of the Victorian Congregational Home Missions, and Mrs. Jones, celebrated their silver wedding last Thursday.

CHAPTER XI.

FOR THREE HALF-CROWNS.

Wirlescombe, with a scarcely perceptible glance at his companion, tapped Mr. Shipps on the shoulder and pointed to an inner door at the back of the shop.

"I see you've got a quiet little place there," he said. "Let's step in and talk quietly."

Mr. Shipps moved aside with alacrity. "By all meanths, ma tear thir!" he said. "With plethure. Motheth," he added to a curly-headed youth who had been engaged in some remote recess since the visitors' entrance. "Mind the thop, Motheth, and don't do any bithneth without contholting me. Now, gentlemen!"

Mr. Shipps opened the door which the detective had indicated and ushered his visitors into a small apartment which immediately communicated a mingled odour of strong waters and equally powerful cigars. It was crowded from floor to ceiling with odds and ends of everything imaginable, and Wirlescombe at once formed the opinion that while Mr. Shipp's ostensible trade was the purchasing and selling of cast-off, second-hand and misfit clothing, he also did another trade in buying and disposing of any likely thing that came in his way, even to books, pictures, and musical instruments, not to speak of silver and electroplate. There was, indeed, scarcely room to move, and, at first sight, nowhere to sit down, but Mr. Shipps hastily removed various articles from a decrepit sofa which stood in a corner, and waved his visitors towards it as if he had been a Sultan and they Imperial ambassadors.

"You'll thmoke a thigar and take a little thomething, gentlemen?" said Mr. Shipps, pitably and ingratiatingly as he trotted into another crowded corner and opened a cupboard. "I can give you a drop of the finest Hollandth gin that ever came into the country, and you'll find thothe thigarth of the very firtht quality. There are thingth to be found even in Turnpike Pathage, you know, Mither Wirlethcombe, eh?"

"Trust you for that," answered Wirlescombe, giving Graye a look which signified that he was to accept the old Jew's hospitality. "Gentlemen like you generally have a drop of good spirits and a well-kept cigar somewhere about."

"Hee—hee—hee!" tittered Mr. Shipps as he set glasses and water and a dusky-looking bottle on the table. "Well, you thee, ma tear thir, it'h all the amuthement one gets in a monotonoth life, eh? Now, you can't buy Hollandth like thith, Mithter Wirlethcombe, and you couldn't, young gentleman, becauthe you wouldn't know where to go, you know. It'h like milk, I thure you. Your very good health, Mithter Wirlethcombe, and yourth, young gentleman."

Graye observed with astonishment that the glasses which the old Jew took out of the cupboard were of the very finest crystal and exquisitely shaped. He was further astonished to see that the cigars which he produced were of a noted and most expensive brand, and were all wrapped in foil and packed in tea. The old Jew, who had sipped at his spirits and lighted a cigar himself, saw the look in the lad's eyes, and leaning back in the crazy old armchair, into which he had dropped, chuckled with satisfaction.

"Ah! young gentleman, you won't get a thigar like that every day!" he said. "Take it thlowly—thmoke it thlowly. You're the young gentleman that wath in the flat the night when the poor gentleman wath took away, aren't you? Oh, yeth! I conclude tho."

Graye glanced at the detective. Wirlescombe answered for him.

"Yes, this is the young gentleman," he said. "Now, then, what did you want to see us about, Mr. Shipps?"

Mr. Shipps rubbed his hands on the knees of his trousers.

"And a very unpleathant thing it must have been to wake up in the morning and find the old man with a knife thtuck into him," he remarked, ruminatively, still regarding Graye. "Oh, very unpleathant. Ah! And" he turned his attention to Wirlescombe, leaning forward and dropping his voice, "and what about the reward, ma tear thir? What about the little reward?"

"There isn't any reward," answered the detective. "No reward's offered."

Mr. Shipps lifted his hands.

"No reward! Oh, ma tear Mithter Wirlethcombe, what a mithtake," he said. "No reward for gentlemen what have thomething to tell. Oh, dear me, you can't expect to do no buthneth on terms like thothe, Mithter Wirlethcombe! It'h unnatural. That'h not buthneth. Everything hath it'h value in the world, Mithter Wirlethcombe, don't it?"

"I never said it hadn't," replied Wirlescombe. "I only said that so far there's no reward offered in this affair."

Mr. Shipps leaned still further forward and laid a claw-like hand on the detective's knee. His eye glittered.

"But thereth going to be, ma tear Mithter Wirlethcombe?" he said. "Thereth going to be, of courth, ithn't there. Oh, it wouldn't be proper Mithter Wirlethcombe, if there wathn't a reward. Never heard of such a thing in ma life!"

Wirlescombe stared the old Jew in the face for a full minute before he spoke.

"Look here, Mr. Shipps," he said. "Let's get to business. There's no reward offered. Officially, there isn't likely to be a reward offered. But, unofficially, it might be worth the while of anybody who knows anything to tell what they know. I gather that you've been reading the newspapers?"

"I have read the newthpapers. Alle the two dethcriptions of the girl and the man," answered Mr. Shipps. "It wath a great mithtake not to put five hundred poundth reward on top of thothe dethcriptioneth, Mithter Wirlethcombe—oh, a great mithtake!"

"We're talking business," said the detective. "You know something?"

Mr. Shipps inclined his head and took another sip at his glass.

"Is it about the missing man or the missing girl?" asked Wirlescombe.

Mr. Shipps bent forward again, and lowered his voice.

"The mithing girl!"

Wirlescombe felt Graye start. He gave him a slight nudge. Once more he gave the old Jew a steady stare.

"You're sure of it?" he asked.

"As thure ath one can be thure of anything," answered Mr. Shipps. "Tell you I'm thure of it. So will you be, Mithter Wirlethcombe, if you like to find out what it ith that I'm thure about."

"Aye, of course!" said Wirlescombe. "That means you want paying for what you've got to tell?"

Mr. Shipps rubbed his knees and chuckled. "Everything hath ith value, ma tear thir," he observed.

Wirlescombe looked at Graye. His look said plainly enough "Shall I bargain, on your behalf, with this old money-grabber?" and Graye, with a single glance, answered him plainly, "Yes."

The detective took two or three meditative pulls at his cigar before he spoke. Then he gave Mr. Shipps a glance full of meaning.

"I'm not going to buy a pig in a poke," he said.

Mr. Shipps spread out his hands deprecatingly.

"Ma tear Mithter Wirlethcombe!" he exclaimed. "That would not be bithneth!"

"It might be, from your point," said Wirlescombe imperturbably. "It certainly would be from mine. Now then, this young gentleman, Mr. Adrian Graye—you've seen his name in the newspapers, so it's no use concealing it here—is anxious that this young woman, Gemma Graff, should be found. Can you give us any clue to anything about her? Can you tell us anything that might put us on the track?"

Mr. Shipps nodded solemnly three times.

"I can!"

"Go ahead, then!" said the detective. "What is it?"

Mr. Shipps smiled. The smile began somewhere underneath his beard and moustache, and gradually opened up his face to his eyes and forehead—even his smoking-cap seemed to wrinkle with it.

"The termth, ma tear Mithter Wirlethcombe," he said, with tender inflection. "The termth? Bithneth—ith bithneth."

Wirlescombe growled.

"There's no doing anything with men like you unless you get some money in hand," he said. "Now, then, look here. I happen to know that Mr. Graye is sufficiently well off to give you what I shall call a handsome reward if you tell us anything that will lead to the finding of Gemma Graff. You know me, or you know of me. I'll guarantee that you're paid. Now, then, five pounds down on the spot and forty-five more when the girl is found!"

Mr. Shipps' smile gave place to a look of blank amazement. He lifted both hands.

"Oh, ma tear Mithter Wirlethcombe, it'h not pothible! I couldn't think of it!" he exclaimed. "What of my valuable time, ma tear thir? I come down to the Yard to waste the bithietht part of the day!"

Wirlescombe stirred impatiently and exclaimed again.

"How much?" he demanded. "What do you want?"

"Twenty-five pounds down, and another hundred when the girl ith found," answered Mr. Shipps promptly.

At first it may seem a most glorious fate To be throned in an auto-car stiff and late; But people who travel by tram, train, or boat Escape all the evils of motor-car throat. For a car always swirls up, up its speed, A gale of its own, which has with it dread; But no motorist ever need sore throat endure When chemists sell Woods' Peppermint Cure.—Advt.

Why a Wunderlich in preference. For the same reason that the modern soldier wants a Lee-Enfield rather than a flint-lock musket. Judged from any angle of view, the Wunderlich Ceiling is the ideal. It cannot deteriorate, fall, crack, warp, harbour vermin, or wear out. It costs little more, if any, than any other ceiling to erect, and measured up by results is the most economical of all. Beautiful in appearance, it appeals to all, and once up is up for ever. Our catalogue goes fully into the merits of this modern method of home beautifying.

AUGUST REVIEWS.

THE EUROPEAN SITUATION.

All of the English reviews contain special articles dealing with the situation in Europe, but they were printed before the outbreak of war, and it is with the situation as it then was that the articles deal. Writing in the "Contemporary Review" on "The Balkan policy of the Habsburg Empire," Theodor von Sosnosky, beginning with a reference to the assassination of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand at Sarajevo, says that the future alone will show whether that tragedy is a direction post or a gravestone for the Dual Monarchy. "The decisive battles will probably not be fought in the Balkan peninsula, but very far away; nevertheless, the occasion for the coming great struggle, which neither the Monarchy nor Europe will be spared, will be furnished by the Balkans, the Pandora-box that has always brought misfortune to Europe." In the course of a critical survey of Austria's Balkan policy, the writer tells us that Italy has no love for her partners in the Triple Alliance, and displayed considerable hostility towards Austria in the troublous times of 1909, following upon the outbreak of the Young Turk revolution in Constantinople. Italy had even gone as far as to issue summonses to the colours and mobilisation placards. As a matter of fact, these summonses—merely redated—were used in the Tripoli war. "Some of these documents," we are told, "interesting as to Italy's faithfulness to Allies, have found their way to Austria, and brought incontrovertible proof that Italy was ready in the year 1909 to fall upon her ally in the rear if this ally had been attacked on the other side (Russia, Servia)."

There is also an interesting article in the "Contemporary" on the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, written by Dr. R. W. Seton-Watson. Of all the Crown Princes of the Continent, he says, none could be so ill-spared as the heir to the Austrian throne. He was a strong man, who knew his own mind—the strong man of the monarchy—full of high ideals, and possessed of the necessary energy to translate them into action. The entry of Austria-Hungary upon the sphere of naval competition is directly ascribed to his initiative. As for the new heir-apparent, Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, he has given no indication of signal ability, but has an absolutely clean record, and enjoys great popularity.

The cause and the consequences of the murder of Francis Ferdinand are discussed by Mr. J. Ellis Barker in the "Fortnightly Review." He points out that the Emperor Francis Joseph is now 84 years old, and that the Prince who will succeed him is only 28, and is quite inexperienced in matters of government. Will the young Prince be able to govern successfully the least homogeneous and the most distracted State in the world? Will Austria-Hungary hold together? It is doubtful. In Austria-Hungary there are only 12,000,000 Germans, and less than 10,000,000 Magyars, but there are about 27,000,000 Slavs. If ever a Greater Servia should arise on the ruins of Austria-Hungary it will arise owing to Austria's impolicy, for Austria has unified the Servian race. As to the alliance with Italy, it is of very questionable binding power. Francis Ferdinand was not a friend of Italy, and believed in the possibility, if not the necessity, of an Austro-Italian war. Mr. Barker quotes from a book recently published by the German Navy League on this point: "In both countries there is a strong party which considers the other country as the enemy, and urges for war." In conclusion, he says that the position of the Dual Monarchy is a desperate one. Austria-Hungary is not only dependent upon Germany in a political and military sense, but also economically, for practically one-half of her foreign trade is carried on with Germany, and the German money market is indispensable for financing Austrian enterprise.

Writing on "Germany, Russia, and Austria-Hungary" in the "Nineteenth Century," Sir Harry H. Johnston throws an interesting light on recent events. Especially interesting is his statement that "Short-sighted as the Prussian policy too often is, it is still sufficiently in touch with world affairs to realise that Germany would be absolutely ruined for a century if she threw herself into a struggle with France, Britain, Belgium, and Holland. Financially, she would be ruined almost before war began, and even if she achieved a victory over the forces of Britain and France, in prostrating both those countries she would be bankrupting herself, even if she had the satisfaction for some weeks or months of strutting about the ruins of a bombarded London or a damaged Paris." Yet Germany has attempted more than this; she has added Russia to her list of enemies, and she has to carry Austria on her back. Referring particularly to Belgium, Sir Harry Johnston informs us that, as German capital had practically come to control Antwerp, it was believed in Berlin that by degrees, by the display of threatening force towards France and England, by bribes and compulsion, Belgium might be led to enter into such intimate relations with the German Empire that, like Holland and Luxembourg, she would form part of a great Teutonic federation with its foreign policy controlled from Berlin.

In the course of an article dealing with the British Navy in the "Fortnightly," Mr. Archibald Hurd makes an interesting reference to the German naval organisation. Some time ago, he says, two Spanish officers were given facilities for studying that organisation, and in summarising their conclusions they stated: "The German Navy has a definite and immediate objective; everything must be prepared for a rapid, energetic, and decisive action. Her ships equipped by her national industry, rich in resource of every kind, provided with war material of the highest efficiency, must be ready to dart at a given moment against an enemy whose fleet awaits them almost at the mouth of the German ports. The first encounter, fierce and terrible, will decide the campaign, and will influence the future of both nations. The partial actions, the long blockades, the prolonged manoeuvres of fleets, which require such seamanship, such skill in the personnel, will necessarily be eliminated in the future war. All that is required is men of action, with the determination to win in one day of supreme and fierce struggle."

A NATIONAL MEDICAL SERVICE.

In the June number of the "Nineteenth Century," Dr. W. A. Brend, Lecturer on Forensic Medicine at the Charing Cross Hospital, contributed an article advocating a national medical service, particularly with a view to catering for the poor. In the August number, Dr. Harry Roberts, author of "The Public Control of Hospitals" and other publications, deals with the difficulties of the situation, and generally combats Dr. Brend's arguments. If medicine were an exact science, like mathematics, he says, or an art like surgery, it would probably be easy enough to organise an efficient State service; but it is its very inexactness, its "humanity," which make it difficult to pigeon-hole. The real success of a salaried medical service, in his view, must depend on the existence among the great bulk of practitioners of a degree of public spirit, indeed of religious zeal, which observation scarcely justifies us in assuming. With the ordinary motive of a desire to please their patients removed, what motives would there be left to induce the doctors to do more than the bare necessary routine work of their office?

AMERICAN HUMOUR.

Professor Stephen Leacock, of M'Gill University, Montreal, writes in the "Nineteenth Century" on American humour. It may be a somewhat yenturesome task to write on humour in a serious and critical strain, but Professor Leacock is equal to the task. At the outset he reminds us that the literary critics of England gave to Mark Twain his first recognition as a man of letters, while yet the over-sophisticated intellect of Boston persisted in viewing him as a Nevada journalist; and Artemus Ward, during his brief career, was the joy of English audiences, puzzled and enraptured with the very mystery of his humour. In the literary dearth of America—and Professor Leacock insists that "we people of America have not shown ourselves a literary people"—there has been one salient exception, and this has been found in the province of humorous writing. Further, he says the fresh air of the western country and the joy of living in the open have inspired Americans with a sheer exuberant love of lying that has set its mark upon their literature. The Americans produce humorous writing because of their intensely humorous perception of things, and in despite of the fact that they are not a literary people; the British people produce a higher form of humorous literature because of their literary spirit, and in spite of the fact that their general standard of humorous perception is lower. In the one case humour forces literature, in the other literature forces humour.

OUR IMMIGRATION FARCE.

A LONDON POINT OF VIEW.

(BY ARTHUR MASON.)

LONDON, July 31.

Urged to a strenuous decision by the calibre of the subject in view, I had it in mind this week to write very seriously. The subject was immigration—and immigration is undoubtedly a serious matter. But no sooner had I achieved the mood proper to a discussion of that which ought to be the all-encompassing national activity of Australia; no sooner had I begun to think in terms of breadth and bigness, than a week's news of Australia came to hand with that very subject of immigration prominent in it—prominent, and mean and small and narrow. And reading that news, my entirely laudable objective of a serious discussion of immigration to our State from this end of the world vanished into nothingness. The appropriate mood I had been at pains to cultivate was shattered and dissipated. Only the humour of the situation remained. Irresistible laughter was all the greeting one had for this pre-eminent Australian subject as officially set forth in Australia's pre-eminent State.

For that week's news included report of a controversy between the Premier of New South Wales and the secretary of the A.W.U. as to immigration—and in view of it I defy any man who possesses both a sense of humour and a knowledge of the immigration procedure on this side to preserve his gravity. Indeed—once he has balanced the conditions here with the conditions in New South Wales as established by that controversy—I question whether any man can fairly credit New South Wales with any policy of immigration. The inward eye of faith might do so, or the microscopic eye of magnified perceptiveness. But the merely intelligent looker-on must surely dismiss the position as hopelessly absurd.

Briefly, the secretary of the A.W.U. condemned boy immigration to New South Wales, and arraigned the Government for its share in boy immigration. His quotation of advertisements and paragraphs in British newspapers showed him strongly buttressed with evidence in support. Also, briefly, the State Premier discussed those advertisements and paragraphs, and denied the existence of a Government scheme of boy immigration. Now, to my mind, that sets up a distinctly humorous situation. A tragi-comic situation rather, calling, if for laughter at all, for grimly sardonic laughter. For, if we are not immigrating boys, what is it we are immigrating? If we are not immigrating boys, Victoria is, and South Australia is, and Western Australia is—and what ludicrous pretence of a policy is it that shuts boys out from one State and admits them to three others? Why does the High Commissioner for Australia go down to Tilbury on occasions, and officially address departing shiploads of boys as Australians to be, if the most prosperous State of Australia is officially closed to them? On what sort of basis does the Victoria-New South Wales combination in London work, while boys are the first care of Victoria and no concern at all of New South Wales?

Of course New South Wales immigrates boys. Undoubtedly this country is energetically canvassed for boys desirous of proceeding thither. Only they are Dreadnought boys, and not Government boys. The advertisements, it is true, do not complicate the already sufficiently delicate business of New South Wales immigration by detailing the Dreadnought scheme, but before the boys set out that scheme is well and truly laid before them. Obviously, however, the Dreadnought scheme has only a limited capacity of assimilation, and if our State's hospitality is confined to Dreadnought boys our policy of boy immigration is little else than make-believe. Perhaps non-Dreadnought boys do float in on the Dreadnought tide, to make irregular landing in some or other parts of the State not authorised to give them welcome. I hope they do. And, after all, it would only be one more confusion in a matter already staggering under incredible weight of that commodity.

For the truth is, boys are being recruited for us by quite a number of those private emigration concerns which make up such a hotch-potch medley in London. They do not accomplish much, these private agencies, but they talk a good deal, and from time to time they hold pathetically insignificant annual meetings for rehearsal of their almost negligible contribution to the great issue. The Church Army, the Salvation Army, the Central Emigration Board, the Central Unemployed Body—these are but a few of such agencies. At this moment I have before me an earnest of their intention upon the boys of England. It is a card bespeaking my attendance at the People's Palace, Mile End-road, where Mr. Colin Bell and Mr. Johnny Summers, the well-known pugilists, are announced to deliver speeches in testimony of Australia as worth the attention of boys of London's East End. Then we have had, recently, Mr. Herbert Easton, with his own particular scheme of immigration settlement, and we have had Mr. Jesse Collings protesting against further depletion of the English country-side, and we have had the Agents-General for Western Australia and Tasmania urging upon him the claims respectively of Western Australia nd Tasmania as against any other corner of the earth's surface, not excluding the rest of Australia. But as to that State advocacy, most of the Australian States have their own individual propaganda—constantly changing in detail, and constantly a confusion—what time the Commonwealth Office heroically exploits Australian displays, and more heroically writes up the attractiveness of Australia, without having an ounce of authority for the actual emigration of anybody. And now, for diversion, we have the secretary of the A.W.U. angrily at issue with the Premier of New South Wales in the matter of boy immigration, and the Premier heatedly disavowing shiploads of boys alleged to have been projected from the Strand, London, upon a reluctant Darling Harbour and the unresponsive farm lands behind it.

What a spectacle of ineptitude it all is, and what a burlesquing of terms is our sometime description of it as the Australian immigration policy! The absurdity of it, too, is at once emphasised and condemned by the quite admirable machinery which at this end exhausts itself in persuasion of immigrants to Australia. One had almost said that its effort is useless, and its cost a futile wastefulness. For, even with the boys, we make much cry for very little wool. Without the boys, our immigration would be a moribund failure. In the first six months of the current year, New South Wales figures show a total of 2006 immigrants, and Victorian figures 2800, while the other States are hardly worth quoting at all. Of boys, Victoria has taken 4500 in twelve months, and New South Wales some 500. Are they nine times more badly needed in the sister State than in our own? Not at all. But we, thanks to the pressure of the unions, and the fibreless acquiescence of the Government, are at an immigration standstill. We have no policy worthy the name.

If we will not take the boys, then, shall we be more amenable to the offer of men? Agricultural labour may be hard to get, by reason of the awakening of England to the danger of unlimited emigration, or it may be easy to get by reason of industrial unrest. In either case we shall get it only with difficulty while our Government invites it with one hand and thrusts it back with the other. Our merely lip-service is of no avail against the heart-to-heart appeal of Canada and the United States. The British agriculturist begins to believe he is not wanted in Australia. Once he believes that, our immigration from Great Britain is not merely moribund. It is dead. Do we not want him? The existing prosperity of our country and its tremendous per head results on a small population basis are solid facts enough. But, in respect of the solidity of our future they are illusion. The worst of it is, they can only be proved to be illusion when that future becomes jeopardised by causes outside them.

Failing the British boy, and the British agriculturist, there remains to us the Continent. Official inquiry both from the Commonwealth Department in London and the New South Wales-Victoria office, shows it as a potentially prolific field. A real Australian immigration policy could attract thousands of skilled agriculturists from Germany, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, and Finland. Do we not need them? Shall we not increasingly need them if our huge irrigation enterprise is to fulfil itself? At present, while the Australian looker-on in London sees the great immigration trek in Europe, in North America, and in South America, a movement of armies of men and women and children, he discovers it in his own country as a poor dribble of scattered units. He sees a batch of a dozen or so prospecting Americans received almost cap-in-hand, obsequiously, as though they represented his country's deserts. He sees a Premier of a State wrangling with the secretary of a union over the influx of a few hundred boys. He reads Australia's immigration figures, and, reading them, what option has he but to write down the whole business as a farce?

A MOTHER'S LETTER TO MARRIED WOMEN (Adelaide Series, No. 2).

The doctor said: "In all my experience I have never known a woman to be left such a wreck."

This is a letter all married women should read, because it tells them in a few words what Clements Tonic did for its writer, and what a debt she owes to that miracle-working medicine. No house or home is equipped without it. Here is Mrs. Okley's letter. It is worth any woman's time to read it thoughtfully:— "New-street, "Queenstown, S.A., 21-10-'12.

"CLEMENTS TONIC, LTD.

"If one person should be more thankful than another for Clements Tonic it is myself. Five years ago, when my boy was born, I passed through a very bad time. I was left so weak the doctor said MY NERVES WERE COMPLETELY SHATTERED, and in all his long experience he had not known a woman to be left such a wreck.

"When able to get up for a while I WOULD HAVE TO GO BACK TO BED TREMBLING LIKE ONE WITH ST. VITUS' DANCE, WITH EVERY TOOTH IN MY HEAD ACHING. I would cover my face, hoping warmth would bring relief, and everything was done to reduce my pain.

"A well-known experienced nurse advised me to take CLEMENTS TONIC. She had used it among her patients for years with wonderful success. SHE SAID IT WAS THE ONLY MEDICINE WORTH RECOMMENDING.

"I was three months ill, and a course of it for six weeks completely PULLED ME ROUND AND EVER SINCE I HAVE BEEN IN SPLENDID HEALTH. We always keep Clements Tonic.

"(Signed), A. F. OKLEY."

Many persons recommend this medicine because they see the direct result of it in renewed strength in convalescent patients. Many others also rely upon it and recommend it to sufferers because it is a good nerve remedy. Mrs. Okley's testimony is of special value to women who suffer from Sick Headache, Anaemia, Insomnia, Weakness after Fevers, or other Illnesses. ALL CHEMISTS and STORES SELL CLEMENTS TONIC.—Advt.

THE ELECTIONS.

DAY OF BATTLE.

A FINAL APPEAL.

To-day the people of the Commonwealth are called upon to elect A NEW PARLIAMENT. It will be the sixth Federal Parliament.

The position is unusual. Not only have we to elect a new House of Representatives, but we have also to elect an entirely new Senate. Ordinarily, only half the members of the Senate—three of the representatives of each State, making a total of 18—have to be elected at the end of a Parliament; but, owing to the double dissolution, it has been necessary this time for all 36 senators to go to the country.

The double dissolution was the outcome of the absolute refusal of the Labour majority in the Senate to allow any business to be done. The Liberals had a majority in the House of Representatives, but it was quite impossible for them to make any headway against the organised obstruction of the Labour party. Two test measures were presented to the Senate—one provided for the restoration of the postal vote, the other for the abolition of preference to unionists in Government departments—and they were both thrown out. That led to the appeal to the Governor-General for a double dissolution, in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution. To-day's elections are the result.

The Labour party has made an attack on the Governor-General for granting the double dissolution—it is the first time we have had one since the Federal Parliament was opened—but in the circumstances his Excellency had no option but to grant it. Now it is for the people to see that similar circumstances do not arise again. To-day's appeal is an appeal for the RESTORATION OF RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENT; and, even if the Labour party should come back with a majority in the Senate, the indications are that that majority will be reduced to such an extent that a repetition of the farce of the last Parliament is not likely to occur.

But it is our hope that the Labour party will find itself without a majority at all in the next Senate. With Liberal majorities in both Houses, we may look forward to USEFUL LEGISLATION; with the Liberals in a majority in the House of Representatives and the Labour party with a preponderance of power in the Senate, we must look for further trouble.

Whilst the war continues, of course, we may expect both parties to sink their differences and unite for the common good—for the good of Australia and for the good of the Empire—but we have to remember that the war is not going to last forever. It will probably be over before many months have passed, and the Parliament to be elected to-day WILL LAST FOR THREE YEARS.

Apart from the immediate drain it will mean upon our finances, we must expect many DIFFICULT QUESTIONS to arise as a result of the war—questions of defence, questions of unemployment, questions affecting the commercial, industrial, and social welfare of the whole nation—and it is in the highest degree important that the Government of the country shall be in the hands of ABLE AND EXPERIENCED MEN. We shall assuredly need such men in the days that are approaching. As yet we do not fully realise what this great war means to us, but we shall have reason to be sorry if we fail to rise to the occasion to-day and make the best provision we can for meeting a situation which must daily become more complex and more difficult.

Whilst the great battle is raging between the rival armies in France to-day, we have a battle to fight out here also; and though this battle in Australia is fortunately of a different kind, it is none the less fraught with issues of the GRAVEST MOMENT to us as a nation. It is regretted by all that it was necessary to enter upon a political campaign at such a time, but it has had to be done, and we may be thankful that to-day will see the end of it. Most regrettable of all has been the bitterness imported into the contest during the past week or two; and we can only hope that, to which ever side the victory goes to-day, all party unpleasantness will now disappear and we shall have both political parties working as one so long as the war lasts.

When the war is over we must expect party divisions to reappear; and it is just because of the fact that this Parliament is being elected for three years, and that sooner or later the Government will seek to carry out its platform that we urge the electors to VOTE FOR THE LIBERAL PARTY. By so doing they will be voting, not only for sound and stable Government while the war lasts, but also for the full period of the Parliament.

"Face facts for once in your lives," as the Prime Minister, Mr. Joseph Cook, says, "and the great fact of all is that LIBERALISM IS BEST—especially in times like these."

One final word: VOTE!

W. FARMER WHYTE, 38 Hunter-st, Sydney.

A LAST WORD.

Fellow Electors,—

This is polling-day. Upon what you do this day will depend which party is to govern the Commonwealth during the greatest crisis in the history of our race. Only apathy on the part of its supporters can defeat the Labour party.

W. M. HUGHES, MacDonell House.

MR. GRIFFITH'S VIEW.

A NATIONAL CRIME.

Speaking at Annandale last night, Mr. Griffith, Minister for Works, said that, by taking a hand in the election that night, he was being compelled to participate in a great national crime. Throughout the whole Empire, with the one exception of Australia, political parties had been merged into one, and the whole community was working together in the interests of the Empire during the dreadful crisis through which we were passing. In every other portion of the Empire there was but one party, but Mr. Cook, for his own advantage, was manipulating the present crisis, and forcing the people of Australia into two hostile camps.

"I do not know," said Mr. Griffith, "whether it is a fact that before the dissolution was granted by his Excellency, Mr. Cook had confidential information of the impending crisis, but I do know that before the dissolution actually took place on July 30 he and everyone else knew that war was inevitable. Before the dissolution occurred the British fleet had had its orders, and was getting up steam to leave Portsmouth. Before the dissolution occurred the London Stock Exchange was sufficiently patriotic to close its doors. Before our Parliament was dissolved even the outside public knew from the cables that the Empire would be plunged into the most terrible war that the world has ever seen. Had Mr. Cook and his colleagues preferred the interest of the Empire to the interest of their party, they would have advised his Excellency to cancel the 'Gazette' notice dissolving the House before it was actually dissolved on the 30th, and then we would have had a Parliament in existence without the turmoil of an election; and, as Mr. Fisher has shown, the Opposition would have lent its full support to strengthen the hands of the Government. Australia would have been spared the infamy of being the only country in the Empire whose Government was willing to precipitate a party fight in the midst of the most bitter crisis in our history."

FINAL SPEECHES.

PRIME MINISTER'S TOUR.

The eve of battle found the Prime Minister, Mr. Cook, fully employed putting the finishing touches to his electioneering. He spoke at Chatswood, at Crow's Nest, and at Petersham.

In the Chatswood Town Hall there was not a very large attendance. Mr. Cook was cheered by the audience when he made his appearance.

Alluding to the war, Mr. Cook said, amid great cheering, that Australia was determined on its part to see the war through to the very end. The 20,000 Australian troops that were going as an expeditionary force would make room for another 20,000 yet to go. (Cheers.)

Mr. Cook's final remark was: "In the meantime I do commend most warmly to your consideration and support to-morrow the six senators who are standing, and who will need every vote you can give them."

The Prime Minister motored to the Protestant Hall, Crow's Nest, where he delivered an address, and later on he spoke at North Sydney. A further meeting was addressed at the Petersham Town Hall.

Last night Mr. Holman addressed half a dozen election meetings, covering a wide area by motor car, and speaking at Granville, Haberfield, Annandale, Newtown, Marrickville, and Redfern, in the course of a few hours in support of various Labour candidates for the Federal Parliament.

Mr. W. M. Hughes addressed a series of meetings in his own electorate, West Sydney, last evening, and was given a good reception. Starting at Pyrmont, he proceeded to the Glebe, and concluded by speaking to a large gathering in Abercrombie-street. He dwelt particularly upon the loyalty of the Labour party, and the efforts which they made to put the Defence Department upon a sound footing. [illegible]

TO-DAY'S VOTE.

A NATION'S DUTY.

ELECTION PROSPECTS.

We may regret that it is necessary to hold a general election in Australia at the present time, but the fact remains that we have to-day to vote for a new Federal Parliament. We have a national duty to perform, and all who neglect to perform it will be wanting in loyalty to the land of their birth or adoption. It is vitally necessary that all men and women shall vote.

We are excited over the war, it is true, for we know that our own destiny is wrapped up with the march of events in Europe, but we are not such an excitable people that we cannot give a vote at the time of a great national election. The nation is not hysterical, but calm and composed in the face of a great danger; it will be a sad commentary on that national composure and confidence if we fail to register our votes at the ballot-box to-day.

It is urgently necessary that the Federal Parliament shall meet as soon as possible. There are many matters of great importance to come before it, and no man or woman who values the privilege of the franchise, and has the welfare of the country at heart, will let the day pass by without voting.

The polling booths will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.; you will save time and trouble by voting early. It will only take you a few minutes to vote; it is not a very great hardship to give up a few minutes one day in three years for the sake of your country. For, remember that you will not have the chance of electing another Federal Parliament for three years.

You will be handed two ballot-papers, one for the House of Representatives, and one for the Senate. In the case of the House of Representatives you put a cross opposite the candidate you desire to represent you in that House; in the case of the Senate you put a cross opposite each of the six candidates you desire to represent the State—no more than six, and no less.

You may take a card or a piece of paper containing the names of the candidates you wish to vote for into the polling booth, but you must not exhibit it to any other persons, and you must not leave it in the booth.

Vote in the subdivision for which you are enrolled, if at all possible. By so doing you may be saved a lot of trouble.

Electors who find it impossible to vote in their own electorates may vote at any other polling booth under the provisions relating to "absent voters."

Visitors from the country or from other States will find it most convenient to vote at the Town Hall.

Special arrangements have been made to afford facilities for members of the defence and expeditionary forces, in which matter the military authorities have given the Electoral Department every assistance. Polling places have been appointed for the following camps and forts:—Rosebery Park Racecourse, Middle Head, Kensington Racecourse, Randwick Racecourse, Randwick Rifle Range, Queen's Park, Moore Park, Agricultural Show Ground, and Cockatoo Island.

It may be pointed out that there are heavy penalties for canvassing within or near the entrance of a polling place, impersonation, voting more than once, or making an untrue statement in answer to any questions under the Act.

It may be said that never before has it been so difficult to forecast the result of a general election. The issues on which the parties went to the country have been almost completely obscured by the war. The candidates have been addressing meetings all over the country, but they have been small meetings; the public interest has been in other things. Generally speaking, it may be regarded as certain that, without giving much consideration to the special issues of this election, the people who have been accustomed to voting Liberal will do so this time, and those who have been accustomed to voting Labour will do so again.

But in the Labour ranks there are many who hold that it would be unwise to vote for a change of Government at the present time; and there are others still who, whilst supporters of the Labour party in time of peace, believe that the Liberal party is better fitted to deal with the country's affairs in a time of stress like the present, when we require sound and cautious administration in all departments, and especially in the departments of defence and finance.

Indications, so far as it is possible to judge, point to the Liberals coming back with a small majority in the House of Representatives, and to the Labour party returning with a majority—but a reduced majority—in the Senate.

The Prime Minister is at present in Sydney, and will be present to-night at the Liberal gathering in the A.B.C. Rooms, Pitt-street, where progress returns of the voting will be posted up from time to time.

W. FARMER WHYTE, 38 Hunter-street, Sydney.

THE LIBERAL SIX.

FOR THE SENATE.

Are we to have responsible government? That is the chief issue of the elections which take place throughout Australia to-morrow. Under the conditions which prevailed in the last Parliament, when the Labour majority in the Senate consistently blocked all Liberal legislation, despite the fact that the Liberal party had a majority in the people's House, responsible government was impossible. And it will be impossible if we have another Parliament similarly constituted.

We advise the electors of New South Wales to take advantage of the opportunity now presented to them, and vote for the Liberal six for the Senate.

Electors must vote for six candidates—no more and no less; otherwise their votes will be invalid.

Each party has six candidates in the field. The Liberal six are as follows:—

COEN, FRANCIS
GOULD, ALBERT JOHN
MILLEN, EDWARD DAVIS
OAKES, CHARLES WILLIAM
PRATTEN, HERBERT EDWARD TRETHOWAN, ARTHUR KING

W. FARMER WHYTE, 38 Hunter-street, Sydney.

THE FIGHTING LINE.

MIDDLE-AGED AND OLD MEN.

"The middle-aged and the old men who sit at home at their ease should be sent to the front first, for the young men, the flower of the nation, are the ones we can least spare," declared Mr. Arnold Lupton, an ex-member of the British House of Commons, and a member of the International Arbitration League, who is on a visit to Sydney, last night.

The world was very short of people, Mr. Lupton said. Even England, which was reckoned as a densely populated country, would be better off with a larger population. The condition of the people in England had greatly improved in the last 100 years. While the population had trebled, the wealth of England was nine times what it was, and therefore the people possessed three times as much wealth per head. The effect of the killing of so many young men in warfare would be most injurious to the nations engaged in this struggle. It was a suicidal course to let the men who were unmarried be killed. Who were going to marry the girls?

TO THE SOLDIERS.

KITCHENER'S MESSAGE.

The public of Sydney has been waiting ever since the cables came through stating that the British Expeditionary Force had proceeded to France for the full text of Lord Kitchener's advice to each member of that historic company. It has now been cabled out, and one of the chief of all sentences in it, and fraught with great meaning, reads:—"Your duty cannot be done unless your health is sound."

Health to the soldier fighting for his country, or to the civilian fighting the great trade battles at home, is essential. A healthy army should be a successful army, and Captain H. E. U. Burke, formerly of the "Third King's African Rifles," British East Africa, states that Clements Tonic is the ideal nerve medicine for the soldier on active service, or recuperating after severe illness or fever. It is the medicine that has always been to the front throughout Australia, and its effect upon weak or sorely-tried nerves in war time is little short of miraculous.—Advt.

LAW REPORT.

HIGH COURT.

(Before the Chief Justice, Sir Samuel Griffith, Mr. Justice Barton, and Mr. Justice Isaacs).

McCAUGHEY V COMMISSIONER OF STAMP DUTIES.

APPEAL ALLOWED WITH COSTS.

The reserved judgment of the Court was given in the case in which Sir Samuel McCaughey appealed against the decision of the New South Wales Full Court, which upheld the claim made by the Commissioner of Stamp Duties, that an indenture of dissolution of partnership, in respect to the sale of three station properties, "Dunlop," "Tooraie," and "Nocoleche," valued at £250,000 to Sir Samuel McCaughey, was liable to stamp duty as a deed of conveyance.

The appeal was allowed by a majority decision, with costs against the Commissioner of Stamp Duties.

(Before the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Isaacs and Mr. Justice Duffy.)

APPEAL ALLOWED.

The King v Brown.

Argument was concluded in this case, and the Court gave judgment. The Chief Justice said that the order made by the magistrate was made with full jurisdiction, and there was no ground for the granting of habeas corpus.

Mr. Justice Isaacs agreed.

The appeal was upheld, the order for rule nisi for habeas corpus discharged, and the order for trial by jury also discharged.

SUPREME COURT.

BANCO COURT.

(Before the Chief Justice and a jury of four.)

DISPUTE AS TO SHARES.

Faucett v Johnson.

This case is still part heard.

NO. 1 JURY COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Pring and a jury of four.)

INSURANCE ON A MOTOR CAR.

May v Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation, Ltd.

Mr. Curtis and Mr. Maxwell, instructed by Mr. W. C. Clegg, appeared for the plaintiffs, and Mr. Blacket, K.C., Mr. Armstrong, and Mr. Hodgson, instructed by Mr. J. B. Moffatt, for the defendant company. This was an action brought by Henry May and Henry May the younger, trading as May Brothers, of Parramatta-road, Leichhardt, motor car proprietors and importers, against the Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation, Ltd., to recover £300, amount claimed to be due in respect of a policy of insurance taken out in the office of defendants on a motor car.

Defendants' main defence was that the plaintiffs failed to comply with a condition precedent to payment in that they did not within 15 days from the date of the fire give notice in writing to defendants of the nature of the loss, with such particulars as were reasonably practicable; that plaintiffs did not, within three months of the claim being rejected, bring their action, and that they did not correctly set out the price of the car and the date of purchase. Defendants also traversed plaintiffs' allegation that they were the owners of the car at the time of the insurance.

Verdict for the plaintiffs in the full amount claimed.

On the application of Mr. Hodgson, a stay of proceedings was granted on condition that defendant company paid £400 into court within a week to meet verdict and costs.

ACTION FOR INJURIES.

Herrick v Chief Commissioner for Railways and Tramways.

Mr. Gannon, K.C., and Mr. O'Reilly, instructed by Mr. Frank J. Tanner, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Lamb, K.C., and Mr. Boyce, instructed by Mr. J. S. Cargill (solicitor to the Railway Commissioners), for the defendant. This was an action brought by Francis Herrick, milk vendor, against the defendant to obtain compensation for injuries sustained by plaintiff through collision with a tram car. Damages were laid at £2000.

Defendant pleaded not guilty.

Evidence was called for the defence to prove that the accident was caused by the plaintiff's negligence.

The jury returned a verdict for defendant.

NO. 2 JURY COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Ferguson and juries.)

ALLEGED BREACH OF AGREEMENT.

Henry Charles Brierley sued the Regan Pallace Roller Flour Mills, Ltd., claiming £5000 for alleged breach of agreement. The plaintiff asserted that the defendant company, which carries on business at Tamworth, wished to acquire the milling business of George Fielder and Son, for the purpose of forming the Fielder-Regan Milling Company, and agreed with him that in consideration of his securing applications up to 10,000 shares in this company, he would receive 5000 fully-paid shares. He alleged that the agreement had not been fulfilled. The defence was a general denial of the agreement.

The jury decided that the parties did not agree that the 5000 shares were to be allotted by way of remuneration for the plaintiff's services; that the plaintiff consented to the withdrawal of the company from flotation; that the defendants did not promise to pay the money-equivalent of the shares; that it was not reasonably impracticable to proceed with the flotation of the company without committing a fraud; and that the plaintiff was not entitled to damages.

A stay of proceedings was asked for by the plaintiff, and it was granted.

Mr. Ralston, K.C., and Mr. Windeyer, instructed by Messrs. R. A. Monro King and Dowd, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Kelynack and Mr. E. M. Mitchell, instructed by Messrs. Sly and Russell, for the defendants.

IN EQUITY.

(Before the Chief Judge, Mr. Justice Simpson.)

APPLICATION TO RESTRAIN EXPULSION.

Kelly v Commercial Travellers' Association.

Mr. Loxton, K.C., and Mr. J. A. Ferguson, instructed by Mr. Reginald Sullivan, appeared on behalf of Robert Tarlita Kelly, in an interlocutory application for an injunction against the Commercial Travellers' Association of New South Wales, for whom Mr. Rolin, K.C., and Mr. West, instructed by Messrs. Sly and Russell, appeared.

Plaintiff set out in his statement of claim that he was a member of the Commercial Travellers' Club. The competition prize for designs for the new club premises was awarded to Messrs. Eaton and Bates, who were subsequently appointed architects for the proposed new building. At a meeting of the general committee, in May last, one of the members, who, it was alleged, had advocated the claims of another architect, made a certain remark about the awarding of the prize. Plaintiff took exception to the remark, and deemed it his duty to inform Eaton and Bates of it, as a matter seriously affecting their personal and professional honour. In May last Eaton and Bates commenced an action against the person who had made the remark, claiming £2000 damages for alleged slander. At a meeting of the general committee in June last a resolution was passed calling upon him to show cause why he should not be expelled from the association. He declined to resign, and on August 15 last the general committee resolved: "That the general committee has investigated the matter, and decided that it has been proved to its satisfaction that R. T. Kelly has been guilty of conduct derogatory to the character of a gentleman, and prejudicial, in the opinion of the general committee, to the interests of the association, and accordingly the committee now expel R. T. Kelly from membership of the association."

Plaintiff prayed, among other things, that the defendant association, its members, etc., be restrained from excluding, or attempting to exclude, him from the premises, and from interfering with the enjoyment by him of the premises and his rights and privileges as a member of the club, and from otherwise attempting to enforce the resolution or expulsion.

The defence was that the association had power under section 39 of the articles of association to expel any member who had, in the opinion of the general committee, been guilty of conduct derogatory to the character of a gentleman, and prejudicial to the interests of the association. It was alleged that plaintiff had been guilty of such conduct. It was contended on behalf of the association that it would be prejudicial to its interests if, when matters were being discussed, which were the subject of probable litigation against the association, any member of the committee were permitted to divulge to anyone outside what took place; and, further, that it would be undesirable that any member having done so should be permitted to remain in the association.

His Honor reserved his decision.

APPLICATION FOR WRIT OF ATTACHMENT.

Murphy v O'Keefe.

Mr. Flannery, instructed by Messrs. Murphy and Moloney, appeared on behalf of James Murphy, plaintiff in the suit of Murphy v O'Keefe, and applied for a writ of attachment to be issued against the defendant, Mary O'Keefe, for her alleged contempt in not filing in the office of the Master in Equity certain accounts in terms of the decree made on May 15 last, and the directions of the Master of June 5.

There was no appearance on behalf of the defendant.

By a decree made on May 15, the defendant was ordered to account for the sum of £25 alleged to have been given her by plaintiff in connection with a certain concert, which she undertook to organise; and to file accounts with the Master in respect of the proceeds of the concert. On June 5 the Master directed the defendant to file accounts within seven days of service on her of the order, but she had failed to do so, hence the application.

His Honor ordered a writ of attachment to issue, but directed it should lie in the office for 14 days.

(Before Mr. Justice Harvey.)

WILL OF THE LATE STEPHEN MAJOR.

Mr. Maughan, instructed by Mr. A. W. E. Weaver, agent for Messrs. Ryan and Wheeler, of Kiama, appeared on behalf of the trustees of the will of the late Stephen Major, of Kiama, in an originating summons, in which they asked for the determination of the Court of certain questions respecting the will.

His Honor held that the widow was tenant for life, subject to a discretionary trust to maintain testator's unmarried daughters; that the annuity of £200 to William Stewart was payable as from testator's death, out of the income; and that the gifts to the infant grandchildren were postponed until the death or re-marriage of the widow.

STRATHCEDAR TIMBER RIGHTS.

Coombes v Dawson and another.

Mr. F. A. A. Russell, instructed by Mr. R. H. J. Dawes, agent for Mr. Janssen, of Taree, appeared on behalf of Charles Joseph Coombes, in an application to continue the interim injunction, which had been granted by the Chief Judge in Equity (Mr. Justice Simpson), restraining the defendants, Frederick Dawson and E. F. Broad Ltd., from felling or removing timber from the holding of the defendant Dawson, at Strathcedar, near Wingham, to the prejudice of plaintiff's rights, as set out in the statement of claim.

Mr. Maughan, instructed by Messrs. Hooke, Borthwick, and Company, of Taree, appeared for the defendants, to oppose.

His Honor granted an injunction till the hearing of the suit.

MARINE COURT.

(Before Judge Murray and Captains Allen and Bracegirdle, assessors.)

FERRY MASTER'S CERTIFICATE.

John Dunstan, the master of the ferry steamer Lady Napier, which collided with the tug Linda Davis, which had a punt in tow, in Darling Harbour, on July 27, the Court having decided that the collision was caused by the want of care on the part of Dunstan in keeping his engines going after he had become aware of the position of the punt, instead of stopping and reversing his engines, appeared to show cause why his certificate should not be suspended or cancelled.

Mr. Robison appeared for the Superintendent of Navigation, and Mr. W. C. Moseley for Captain Dunstan.

The Court decided that in view of the doubt which existed as to any lights being exhibited on the tug or punt, and taking into consideration Dunstan's very long and exemplary record, it would refrain from dealing with his certificate or taking other steps against him by way of punishment, and ordered that the certificate be returned to him.

DISTRICT COURT.

(Before Judge Docker and a jury.)

Henry Berry and Company Proprietary, Ltd., v Kirkland.

In the case in which Henry Berry and Company Proprietary, Ltd., of 135 York-street, Sydney, merchants, claimed £156 9s 6d from Thomas R. Kirkland, of Illawarra-road, Marrickville, master baker, alleged to be the amount due to plaintiffs by defendant for the purchase and erection, and alteration of the position, of a four-pocket dough divider, judgment was entered for the defendant in terms of the award of the arbitrator (Mr. F. Gartrell), to whom the matter was, by consent, referred after certain evidence had been given.

The defendant paid £11 11s 6d into court, and pleaded never indebted as to the balance on the ground that the machine was not satisfactory, and it was a term of the contract that he was only to pay for the machine if it were satisfactory.

Mr. A. R. J. Watt, instructed by Mr. J. J. Carroll, appeared for the plaintiff company; and Mr. R. Windeyer, instructed by Messrs. Mark Mitchell and Forsyth, for the defendant.

A plea of not guilty on the ground of insanity was entered, Mr. Moriarty, instructed by Mr. J. B. Frawley, appearing for the defence, assigned by the Crown.

The jury returned a verdict of not guilty, on the ground of insanity, and Cottle was ordered to be detained at the Governor's pleasure.

Mr. J. N. Mason, Crown Prosecutor.

SHIPPING CLERK'S DEFALCATIONS.

Percival Harold Abel, aged 26, a clerk in the employ of Messrs. Burns, Philp, and Co., Ltd., pleaded guilty to stealing a cheque for £85 19s 6d, the property of the company. Evidence was given that the total defalcations amounted to between £600 and £700. Mr. D. Levy, who appeared for Abel, admitted that this was correct, and said arrangements were being made to refund the money. Abel was remanded for sentence, pending arrangements for restitution.

A CARTER'S THEFT.

Samuel Sharpe, aged 33, a carter, pleaded guilty to stealing a case of iodoform, containing 56 bottles, valued at £60, the property of the New South Wales Stevedoring Company, on July 28. Mr. E. R. Abigail appeared for Sharpe, and asked for leniency. Sharpe did not know the value of the goods, and had offered them for sale for a few shillings. In remanding the prisoner for sentence his Honor said these offences were becoming rife.

SHOP-LIFTING.

Jennie Wright, aged 26, and Elizabeth de Buff, aged 28, pleaded guilty to stealing eight dresses from the shop of Farmer and Co., Ltd. Jennie Wright pleaded guilty to a further charge of stealing two bottles of perfume from Lassetters, Ltd. Mr. E. R. Abigail appeared, and said de Buff was employed at Farmer's, and gave the dresses to Wright. They had not been worn, and had been recovered. Both prisoners were sentenced to nine months, but released as first offenders.

VOLUNTEER'S LAPSE.

Leonard Edgar Forsythe, aged 20, pleaded guilty to stealing a horse, the property of Henry Wardale, at North Sydney. Mr. Petrie appeared. The police admitted that Forsythe had an excellent reputation, but was a military fanatic. He had bought military equipment with the proceeds of the sale of the horse, and, although rejected as a volunteer on account of the loss of an eye, sustained while practising military signalling, he had attached himself to the camp at Randwick, and had rendered excellent drilling service as a sergeant without remuneration. When binding the prisoner over, compensation having been made, his Honor said he should be allowed to go to the front, and he was the kind of material wanted there.

ACQUITTED.

John Clacker, aged 32, was charged with setting fire to a travelling rug at 174 Victoria-street on August 22. Mr. E. R. Abigail appeared, the defence being an alibi. The jury acquitted Clacker, who was discharged.

REAL ESTATE.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

There was practically no change in the Real Estate Market this week. Business went on as usual, and here and there sales were recorded. Of course, the volume of business is small in comparison with the returns for the first half of this year, but it is largely due to the fact that neither buyers nor sellers are to be found. Evidently no one wishes to part with their property, and that is a good sign. It indicates a return to old conditions when something definite is known of war results. There were again several instances recorded this week where owners were offered within £50 of their price, but in every case the offer was declined, so the bargain hunters have no chance at present.

One of the most pleasing features in the week's transactions was the result of the subdivision sale last Saturday afternoon at Northbridge. This estate has proved popular from the outset, and, although it was the fourth subdivision that was being offered, and the distance from the Suspension Bridge greater, the interest shown last Saturday was equal to that displayed at any of the earlier sales. The war did not seem to have made any difference to the attendance, and very little, if any, to the bidding, or the prices obtained. Mr. Raine, who occupied the rostrum, found a difficulty at the sixth lot in No. 1 section. He could not get along for want of bids. He left it and took up No. 2 section. Again, there was a deadlock, after three or four allotments had been sold. He tried the third section, and sold every allotment. Buyers then warmed up, and the interest increased, until the whole of the 75 lots on the plan were disposed of at prices ranging from £1 16s to £3 12s 6d per foot. This gave a total for the afternoon of £5240, or nearly £900 above the reserves. It was, therefore, a most satisfactory sale, and was a complete answer to the pessimists who had decided that the real estate market was practically dead. It was proof, as was pointed out last week, that the public realise that real estate is a safe investment in such times as these. The land cannot run away. Stocks and shares may vanish, but real estate is always to be found, and must on the return of prosperity increase in value.

The result of last Saturday's sale, following on the successful indoor sale held by Messrs. Raine and Horne on the previous Thursday, where, out of a list of nine properties submitted, five were sold, has given new life to business, and it is now likely that further subdivision sales will take place. In fact, arrangements are already being made as to dates, etc.

This was the off week as far as indoor sales were concerned, and few properties were submitted, but the same amount of interest was displayed as in former weeks. The sales held by Messrs. Hardie and Gorman and Richardson and Wrench were both well attended. At both auctions the list was a very small one. Messrs. Hardie and Gorman had only two properties to offer. One of these was sold, and there was a fair amount of bidding for the other. The property disposed of consisted of the old Methodist Church and grounds at the corner of Crown and Chapel streets, Woolloomooloo, a few doors from Stanley-street. This building has for some time been leased to the Salvation Army, but the owner of the adjoining property was the purchaser, and he proposes to convert the church into shops and residences. The price paid was £800, and as the land has a frontage to Crown-street of 27 feet, by 102 feet along Chapel-street, it works out at nearly £30 per foot. The same firm this week disposed of a block in the Rangers Estate, at Mosman, with a frontage to Brierley-street. It brought £10 per foot. They also sold a cottage in Brandon-street, Randwick, for £875, and a block of land in White-street, Artarmon, for 30s per foot.

Messrs. Stanton and Son had a busy week. The firm disposed of a cottage in Falcon-street, North Sydney, for £835; a cottage in Liverpool-road, Abbotsford, for £875; a cottage in Old Kent-road, Punchbowl, for £475; two cottages in the same district, one at £445, and the other at £450. At the Rosebery Model Suburb the firm disposed of a cottage in Dalmeny-avenue for £805; one in Paul's-road, for £930; and a block of land in Dalmeny-avenue at £3 10s per foot.

Messrs. Richardson and Wrench included in their sales this week a block of land in the Bulkira Estate, at Epping, at £2 per foot; also an allotment in the Waitara Estate, Waitara, at 25s per foot.

The measures adopted by Arthur Rickard and Co., Ltd., to meet the emergencies of the prevailing war conditions will appeal to all concerned. In regard to the unemployed, or those who may find themselves in such a position owing to the war, this company is helping them to secure blocks of land on easy terms for poultry farms, market gardens, etc., on payment of the first instalment, all further payments being suspended while the war lasts, providing improvements equal in value to the ordinary monthly payments are made. This should appeal to a large number, as the estates which are offered on these terms are, with one or two exceptions, situated close to railways and markets, and all of them are of excellent quality for the particular class of farming desired. The demand for farming estates has been fairly brisk during the week. Arthur Rickard and Co., Ltd., report several sales of Flushcombe Farmlets, near Blacktown. This property is particularly good for general farming, and Dr. Penfold, whose vineyards are close by, at Minchinbury, is prepared to enter into contracts to purchase the grapes grown at Flushcombe. This is a great inducement, as it enables the prospective wine grower to look forward with confidence for early and profitable results.

Wentworthville farms, at Wentworthville, have also received a fair amount of attention, and buyers have expressed themselves as well pleased with their purchases. Owing to the property being close to two railway stations on the Parramatta-Blacktown line, and near to the Parramatta markets, Wentworthville farms are an inviting proposition for either grower, home-seeker, or investor. Home sites of noble dimensions may also be obtained on this estate. Poultry farms have been in big demand this week. Arthur Rickard and Co., Ltd., report that several blocks have been disposed of on the George's River, Farmlets Estate, near Bankstown, Greenacre Park Extension, and Beaconsfield estates, Bankstown.

The Lands Department notify that it is proposed to alter the alignment of Esher and Milton streets, Burwood.

The Real Estate Association auction rooms are to be officially opened on 23rd inst. The Lord Mayor of Sydney will be invited to perform the opening ceremony. The rooms are centrally situated in Castlereagh-street, facing Moore-street. They will be nicely furnished, and will be used by auctioneers much in the same lines as the Wool Exchange, certain firms having certain times to sell.

In these days of town-planning, the garden suburb of Haberfield is often mentioned. It is really the first attempt that was ever made in Sydney to get out of the usual beaten track and rule of thumb methods of allowing a suburb to come into existence and to grow up without law and order of any description in the way of town-planning. A man built his cottage to one alignment, and his neighbour to something else. It was this free and easy, but most objectionable, style that the building up of Sydney was commenced in the days of Phillip, and such a condition of affairs has more or less remained with us ever since. In consequence, surveyors and others have had a good deal of straightening out to do, which has cost the country a heavy amount of money. It was therefore refreshing when a firm like Messrs. Stanton and Son took hold of this bush land 10 years ago and converted it into what might be termed the finest suburb-building venture in the State. It is admitted by the best authorities that the completion of this undertaking will provide the people of Sydney with a beauty spot, a garden suburb, the like of which cannot at present be found elsewhere; but it is sincerely hoped that the lesson thus set by Messrs. Stanton and Son will be quickly learned, and as quickly acted upon. There is no doubt Haberfield is moving along by leaps and bounds. What were a few years ago grass paddocks and virgin bush is now avenues planted with choice shade trees, peeping through which may be seen artistic residences, standing within fairly large areas of land. These have been built not in a haphazard fashion, but planned with the great objective of founding a purely residential locality. The only means of securing this was to frame regulations to obtain for all time uniformity of class of building, and a minimum area of land as the basis upon which any property could be erected, and greatest of all advantages—to eliminate business premises under any conditions throughout the suburb; but as Haberfield developed and became a populous residential district, a business area was determined upon, and it is now prospering on the tram line, and it is the only area in the suburb where shops are allowed. In that area are to be found every class of shop, properly grouped, and all doing a really good local trade. As an instance of the success of this suburb, nearly 1000 homes, most of them pleasantly situated and artistically arranged, have been erected, and within the next two years the scheme will have been completed. Four handsome churches have been built, also a Public school, a local drill shed, and other buildings of a semi-public or public character. The great ocean outlet sewerage scheme of Sydney has been extended to Haberfield, at a cost of £40,000. Architecturally speaking, this place is full of interest and beauty. The observant visitor cannot help but admire the skill of the designer of this model suburb, and of the homes within it, and at the same time to wonder at so much having been done in so short a period of time. Does it pay to work on artistic lines? The answer is that land values have risen at Haberfield over 150 per cent. in a few years, and are likely to continue to rise. A visit will satisfy anyone that the whole scheme has been splendidly conceived, and is being thoroughly carried on to fulfilment. The absence of legislation regulating the laying out and general building of many similar suburbs around Sydney is to be deplored, but recent events have proved that enterprise in the shape of the work of the Haberfield Proprietary, Ltd., is going to forge ahead, and that town-planning suburbs started by Mr. Stanton has come to Sydney to stay, and will end in the general and wise treatment of both foreshore and inland suburbs.

Messrs. Garratt and Co. report several good sales of suburban properties. This firm disposed of a terrace of eight shops on the Marrickville-road for £6500, a terrace of houses in Hopetoun-street, Paddington, for £4750, a cottage in Albert-road, Strathfield, known as Bellevue, for £1800, and four cottages in Marian-street, Enmore, for £2100. These properties represent a total sales of £15,150.

Messrs. Hugh Duff and Co. included in their sales this week a pair of cottages in Perouse-road, Randwick, for £1065, a cottage in Stanley-avenue, Mosman, for £850, and a block of land on the North Shore line for £950.

BROKEN HILL MINES.

RAVAGES OF PNEUMONIA.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Royal Commission appointed by the Government of New South Wales to inquire into mining conditions at Broken Hill heard evidence yesterday. The Commission consists of Messrs. B. R. Wise (chairman), G. Weir (representing the mine managers), and G. Kerr (representing the miners). Mr. J. R. Edwards appeared on behalf of the mine owners.

Mr. W. E. Wainwright (secretary of the Broken Hill mining and treatment companies' committee) submitted exhaustive statements dealing with the various aspects of employment and health conditions on the field. In discussing the ravages of pneumonia and the desirability of improving the conditions of living, he said that they were out to cope with the disease, and it was worthy of note that the percentage of women who suffered was less than the men. Proper ventilation was a considerable factor in dealing with the disease.

The chairman remarked that in some cases the people lived like pigs or worse.

Mr. Wainwright urged that an expert in bacteriology and diphtheria be appointed as an inspector. Certain assurances had been received from the Government in this direction.

The chairman said that it would be a recommendation of the Commission that consumptives be excluded from the mines.

Mr. Wainwright submitted a comprehensive statement as to the men employed underground on contract and wages.

The chairman said that a point deserving of mention was that in regard to the 116 miners on contract. The contract was set to enable them to earn at least 13s per shift. The evidence was that the majority of them earned a great deal more, ranging from 14s to 20s.

Mr. Wainwright: The average is 18s.

The chairman said that the figures were striking, and it was surprising that a fortnight after the mines ceased the men were starving. Probably the fact that the wages were uncertain encouraged a gambling spirit.

Mr. Weir questioned whether people were starving.

ART AND ARCHITECTURE.

Dr. Thomas Ashby, director of the British School at Rome, was one of the visitors to Australia with the British Association. Dr. Ashby on Thursday night addressed a large gathering of Sydney architects at the Royal Society's Rooms; last night he lectured to the Classical Association, at the University; and to-night he speaks to the Teachers' Training College, at the Technical College, Pyrmont. "My great desire," said the doctor, "is to show Australian students what we are doing, and let them see the advantages of a course of study at the British School at Rome. It is really a finishing, post-graduate school, and is rapidly increasing in popularity in other parts of the world. The number of students and associates on our books for the last two sessions, October to June, has reached a total of upwards of 80. It is also my sincere wish to help the movement for the creation of a chair of architecture at the Australian Universities."

THE OPINION
THE ATHENAEUM.
INFATUATION, by MARCUS KNOX, is a work of remarkable promise and considerable insight, distinguished alike by natural writing and vivid realism.
The main theme concerns the love of a young and beautiful English girl for an Italian priest, who is devoted to his faith, and the author pictures with tragic stress the sacrifice that both make by their complete surrender to the claims of the higher life.
The great problem raised in this book will certainly provoke acute controversy, dealing as it does with a vital aspect of the eternal conflict between the spirit and the flesh. The author depicts with rare and convincing skill the clash of passion with faith, the war of temperaments; and throughout the pages of an arresting story he weaves a thread of excitement, adventure, and sustained interest.
In dealing with deep and debateable questions of sex Mr. Knox writes with fearless courage and complete sincerity, moreover his characters are drawn with a knowledge born of experience; in a word, they are real. He has given us a book that will compel thought and provoke interest, a volume that must by no means be overlooked; a story that every man and woman should read.—A. VERNON CAREY.

HORSES AND WAR.

(BY GABION.)

No animal has been so intimately associated with man's work in the development of the nations of the world as the horse. From the earliest periods of history this animal has taken a leading part in warfare, and has been instrumental in bringing about great victories.

The reign of William the Conqueror marks a turning point in the history of the horse's influence upon the British nation as well as in the general development of the horse. The success of that monarch's warriors was attributed to most of them being mounted. Horses of heavy build were then employed, and the size of these animals was steadily increased by importations of heavy sires from Europe. It was necessary to use 'great' horses, as the armour worn by the soldiers was gradually being increased in weight and strength. Historians declare that by the middle of the sixteenth century a man of medium size could not, when sheathed in armour, have weighed, along with the armour worn by his horse, less than 30st, and often more. It was not until the time of Cromwell that armour received a check, and from that period it was gradually discarded, and, along with it, the heavy war horse, which was replaced by the lighter and more active animal. Up to this period the horse was very prominently associated with the progress of the British Isles, not only on the battlefield, but industrially, as well as in providing the chief sport of the nation. Breeding was carried on systematically, laws were passed with the object of improving the horse, whilst importations of European and North African blood did much to improve the standard of the nation's horses.

After the displacement of armour light horse-breeding made rapid strides in England, whose people, at least those engaged in horse-breeding, were peculiarly gifted in all branches of live stock husbandry. As a result of the skill which was exercised in the production of horses, Great Britain has to-day some remarkable breeds, the finest of all being the thoroughbred. This is the breed from which we obtain the most desirable warhorse of the present day. No other animal possesses those characteristics and qualifications which are so essential in an army remount, and the finest proof of the value of thoroughbred blood for this purpose is to be had from the fact that the great Powers of Europe (Germany, France, Austria-Hungary, and Russia), have freely employed this blood in their State studs. Australian-bred thoroughbreds have even been purchased by the German Government; one stallion, in fact, was awaiting shipment at the outbreak of hostilities.

Militarism amongst the great Continental Powers is a science, and along with the completeness of the systems of organising their armies, the several Powers have maintained their horsebreeding studs in a high degree of efficiency, and none more so than Germany. To this the credit is due to the late Count Lehndorf, who placed great value on the blood of the English thoroughbred, and who was regarded as one of the breed's best authorities. Our allies and foes have afforded us valuable examples in the breeding of army horses. Whilst motors are valuable in certain directions, when it comes to the real hard work of campaigning and actual fighting, then there is nothing which can displace the horse. The Balkan war went a long way towards proving how limited were the uses of the motor in the services of the army. Hence the necessity for keeping up the number, the standard, and the efficiency of the horses for the army.

No less important than having well-bred army horses is the necessity for having them well trained. The education of the army horse has been a special feature of the Continental nations. The Germans attribute their few losses in horses in the Franco-Prussian war to the fact that their horses were not only well bred, but well trained. Since then, however, the other nations have vastly improved the breeding and training of their army horses, and it remains to be proved whether the German-bred horse can outclass those of the other nations. To the French army, in fact, is given the credit of being the best mounted in the world, and the French, be it noted, have been liberal patrons of English thoroughbred blood, the greatest "improving" blood to be obtained.

No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to how any army horse should be bred, but all are agreed as to the breed of sire to be employed. When it is realised that the chief qualifications of a cavalry horse are the ability to carry weight—and a substantial weight at times—to possess the necessary temperament, nerve, courage, stamina, and surefootedness, as well as the ability to cover the ground quickly, we discern in these qualifications the great characteristics of the thoroughbred. No horse can equal a high-grade thoroughbred for cavalry purposes whilst the value of artillery and transport horses is much improved by the introduction of the same blood. The Great Powers of Europe have long recognised the qualities of the English thoroughbred. They have given enormous sums for many of the most famous stallions of the breed in England for use in their State studs.

Mounted soldiers are a necessity, but they must be well mounted. Inferior horses are a hindrance and often bring disaster to their riders. A recent event in the United States should act as a warning to our breeders and our army authorities, as unless something is done to curb the methods at present prevailing in horsebreeding circles, we shall find it a difficult matter to secure a reliable supply of suitable army horses, just as has happened in the States. In this instance some 600 remounts were required for Cuba, yet out of over 21,000,000 horses of all kinds in the States, there was difficulty in securing the number of the right class. America discarded the thoroughbred. We need to profit by this example and for the future adopt the principle of the Continental Powers by using the blood which will produce horses that will be unsurpassed in military work or any other sphere.

THE WOOL TRADE.

SOME OF THE PROBLEMS.

In the ordinary course of peaceful events auction sales of wool, for the disposal of the bulk of the New South Wales clip, would have commenced in Sydney on Monday next; but, as a consequence of the war, an unprecedented set of conditions has come into being; and the problem now confronting the trade is, how best to act under these exceptional circumstances. At the outbreak of the war the trade saw the impossibility of proceeding with the roster; and the first consideration was the storing of wool till the seas were clear for ships, on the one hand, and a demand for the staple, at rates acceptable to growers, could be found, on the other.

The British navy at a very early stage made it possible to ship wool from Australia in friendly and neutral steamers to any but the enemy ports. That was a great Empire achievement, and enables the trade to conduct business with the world in its present circumscribed form. How circumscribed it is, so far as Australian wool is concerned, may be gauged from the fact that the continent of Europe, in the usual and normal course of trade, absorbs 60 to 65 per cent. of the Australian wool clip.

Most of the combing and woollen mills in Germany are probably intact; but not engaged manufacturing fabrics from merino wools for either home consumption or export. What will happen to these mills if the forces of the Allies march through the manufacturing districts of Germany in some such way as the troops of the enemy have been operating in Belgium and France, is a matter for very little conjecture. If fighting takes place, and it is not a mere triumphal march into Berlin, it is only reasonable to suppose that the mills will be thrown out of gear, and possibly wrecked, as completely as some of the mills must be on the line of march of the Germans in France and Belgium. With Austria, the case must be somewhat similar, by the time the Russian armies have made their objective. In any case, we cannot trade in wool or in any other commodity with either Germany or Austria. Our ally, Russia, comes next in the order of Australian wool consumption; and very little trade can be looked for there for some time to come.

The merest glance at Europe shows us how circumscribed the area for fine wool is for the time being; it is bounded practically by Great Britain, the United States, and Japan. Some additional trade will be possible perhaps with the United Kingdom, America, and Japan. There is a limit, however, to the capacity of mills engaged in combing, spinning, and weaving wool. Furthermore, the erection of mills, like the construction of battle-cruisers and Dreadnoughts, is not the work of weeks but of many months. Then comes the question of demand and fashion, in the manufacture of fabrics, and until the war monster is crushed, not much thought is likely to be given to new styles—light or heavy weight cloth, and so forth. The wool-using world, forsooth, is becoming very much poorer by this terrific war; and less costly fabrics will be in demand than was the case only a month ago. Some little breathing time will be needed before Europe can again don its best attire.

Having seen that the wool-using area is reduced by the war, it is also necessary to take cognisance of the fact that the buying power is correspondingly restricted. If trade conditions had been normal, the first weekly series of wool auctions in Sydney would have been followed by auctions in Brisbane on September 15, 16, and 17, as well as by Adelaide, opening the South Australian selling season, on September 17. Nominally there would have been buying power for Sydney and Melbourne, on the one side, and Melbourne for Adelaide, on the other. Now it becomes a question not only for the Sydney trade to consider when auctions shall be held in this centre, but also whether there should be a Federal wool council formed, so that the buying power shall be concentrated, and full value obtained for as much of the clip as can be marketed from time to time while the war lasts.

At no time in the history of the wool trade has it been more necessary to act federally than at this juncture, and never before has it been so necessary not only to prevent a clashing of markets, but also to regulate supplies when it is decided to hold sales in interstate centres. Normally the wool clip contributes largely to the prosperity of the Commonwealth, as well as the pastoral industry; consequently the arrangements made for the disposal of as much of the clip as possible is of considerable interest to the whole community, as well as to the wool-growers who are immediately concerned.

The joint trade committee of Sydney wool brokers and buyers meets on Wednesday next to discuss the matter of future sales, and doubtless the interstate phase of the question will be considered. Hitherto the markets of Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane, and Adelaide have been separate units. There had never previously been sufficient force to weld them together for federal purposes. The time apparently has now arrived; for, if all the clip is not likely to be sold at acceptable prices, the question of proportion to be sold will probably arise. This question of the proportion of wool to be offered in each State also carries with it the proportion of each grower's clip, making the position a very difficult one. Still, it is a time of great national stress, and many things have been accomplished that ordinarily would have been deemed impossible.

According to recent cables, a meeting of wool brokers and importers in London is to be held on September 15 to consider the expediency of opening the sales there on September 29, as previously arranged, or not. Doubtless, the question of quantity will also be dealt with, if it is decided to hold the auctions. There has been some activity in England lately in khaki clothing wools, also in the Commonwealth. So far as the home trade is concerned, it has the domestic clip to draw on for such requirements, also New Zealand wools. Cloth for the army recruiting in the United Kingdom, also blankets and rugs, will be manufactured in good-sized quantities. The clearance of wools for such purposes will tend to make room for the finer grades and longer staple wools. Our own local mills, it is to be hoped, will be working to their full capacity, manufacturing all classes of goods. America is certain to be equally busy, and will tend to absorb a portion of the current season's clip. Largest in importance should be the British section of the trade, and as manufacturers in the United Kingdom have urged the continuance of orders from Australia on the old basis of prices, it is only reasonable to ask for some reciprocity by looking for wool orders at payable rates to growers. If these can be forthcoming in sufficient volume to lift the whole clip by June next, then we shall, indeed, have occasion to be thankful.

SYDNEY WOOL RECEIPTS.

Supplies of wool coming into store are light in consequence of many growers retaining their clips, or portion thereof, on station or farm till the question of sales becomes nearer of settlement. The weather has been fine for shearing, and far too fine to grow grass and herbage for the flocks. Indeed, the condition of the country over two-thirds of the State is causing the greatest anxiety to wool-growers. It is feared that if good, soaking rains do not fall over the affected areas within the next few weeks very large losses of sheep will take place.

Wool receipts in Sydney for the week and season to date compare with the corresponding period last year as follow:—

WOOL SHIPMENTS.

Wool exports last month were naturally on a light scale, aggregating only 9186 bales. A fair quantity, under the war circumstances, was shipped to the United Kingdom, and a small quantity to America and Japan. There was no wool shipped to the continent; nor is any likely to go to Continental ports till the war is brought to a close. BRADFORD.

The Bradford tops market is cabled as quiet, merinos being weaker and stagnant. There is a small demand for common and medium crossbreds.

TO INCREASE THE WHEAT AREA

"Closer Settlement" writes:—It will be readily admitted that if large areas of lands suitable for wheat-growing could be made available in time for next season's sowing, it would not only provide wide avenues of employment, but would go some way towards mitigating the shortage in wheat, which, owing to the drought in many parts of Australia, and the European war, the world has to face next year. The Minister for Agriculture has wisely advised the farmers of this State to devote their energies to wheat cultivation, and similar advice has been given by the Prime Minister of Canada to the Canadian farmers. Unfortunately, owing to various causes which need not be referred to here, owners are unable to place extensive areas under cultivation, and are perforce compelled to run sheep on their lands instead. At the same time, many owners realise that it would really pay them better to dispose of the cultivable lands at a fair price, rather than use them as a sheep run; but the difficulty is to find buyers who have the necessary capital to pay even a reasonable deposit, and the expenses of development, buildings, fences, etc.

The Closer Settlement Act apparently offers a solution of this difficulty, if owners can be found who would be willing to sell and accept as payment certificates issued by the Minister for Lands in accordance with the provision made in the latest Amending Act. At a time like this it could not be expected that the Government would purchase large estates by cash payments, but, under the system of certificates, it is actually the settler who pays by instalments extending over 35 years. If, then, owners can be found who would be willing to accept these terms, all that the Government has to be satisfied with is that the lands are suitable, and would be wholly applied for, and that the price is a fair one. These are the prime factors which should determine the question of acquisition, and as the Lands Department has all the machinery necessary to advise thereon in the shape of a closer settlement branch and advisory boards of great experience, it is suggested that this is an appropriate time for the department to ascertain whether there are owners of suitable wheat lands who would be willing to accept a reasonable price, and payment by certificates.

One important question certainly obtrudes here, and that is, whether lands may not be cheaper after the war than they are at present. If there is any evidence that this will be the case, there would be justification for the suspension of all action in the direction mentioned. But opinions, which I have sought from thoughtful and experienced men, indicate that as regards wheat lands at least, there will be no shrinkage in values, but, in fact, the tendency will be the other way.

An active closer settlement policy, provided it is based on lines financially sound as regards the settler, is at all times desirable, but how much more so at a time like this?

DAIRYING.

MANNING RIVER.—The annual report of the Manning River Co-operative Dairy Company showed that 752,477lb of butter was manufactured, against 1,004,461lb for the corresponding half of last year. There was 7 per cent. of second-class. The company only exported 1328 boxes, which returned a profit of £31 8s 6d. The profit for the year was £306 19s. A dividend of 7½ per cent. was declared. The gross turnover for the half-year was £36,912 12s 3d. The company's reserve fund on fixed deposit stands at £2360 13s 3d. The three old directors were returned: Messrs. D. A. McDonell, Captain Newton, and Alfred Templeton.

DISTRICT ITEMS.

BLACKTOWN.—Mr. Roughley, Government Fruit Inspector in this district, has resigned from the department, and Mr. Nicolson, from Glenorie, has been appointed.

CULCAIRN.—The Culcairn Agricultural Society has decided to hold its show, as advertised, on October 14. This district is not suffering from the drought, and the crops are still looking well, although rain is badly wanted. All towns surrounding Culcairn have gone on with their annual shows, and this society was of opinion that they are in a position to do the same.

GRAFTON.—For the five months ended August 31, H. M. Masters' pen in the Grafton egg-laying competition at the Experimental Farm, led with 558, H. Long 554, second; then A. E. Hattersley 553, and Hewitt and Harrison 553, all of the White Leghorn breed.

CUMNOCK.—Crops are beginning to suffer for want of rain.

COOLAH.—The dry weather is causing some anxiety. If rain does not soon fall the wheat crops will suffer.

TARIFF.

SHIPBUILDING AND AUSTRALIAN ART.

The Interstate Commission appointed to investigate tariff matters continued its inquiry yesterday at Parliament House. Mr. A. B. Piddington, Chief Commissioner, presided, and was assisted by his colleagues, Messrs. G. Swinburne and N. Lockyer.

Mr. J. D. Fitzgerald appeared on behalf of the Imperial Arts League, and made an application for the removal of the duty on works of art.

Mr. Robert Kendall, engineer in chief of existing railways, was called by the Commissioner to give evidence regarding permanent way material used by the Railway Department. He had not considered the question of the extent to which the department would be affected by an increase in the duty on steel rails. That was a matter which did not concern him.

Mr. Swinburne: Would it be an advantage to have the rails made here?

Witness: Yes, because if we could transfer them from the local manufacturer direct to where they were to be used it would mean less cost and inconvenience than was caused by double handling when the material arrived from abroad.

Mr. Richard Manning, managing director of Chapman and Co., Limited, was heard in connection with the local manufacture of marine engines and boilers. He supported the application of Mr. Frankt, of the Mort's Dock and Engineering Co., Ltd., for an increase in the duty on imported marine engines and boilers.

Mr. Barney Barnet Allen, describing himself as a farmer at Muswellbrook, said that he had cultivated eight acres of land with tobacco. He had not been able to sell his product, though he had offered it to four different tobacco companies.

Captain David James Sims, manager of the Illawarra and South Coast Steam Navigation Co., Ltd., gave evidence on behalf of an application by the Coastal Steamship Owners' Association for the free admission of vessels of 500 tons and under.

Mr. Arthur Hugh Poole, of the firm of Poole and Steele, engineers and ship builders, of Balmain, was heard on the suggestion to abolish the duty or turn it into a bounty. He opposed that suggestion. He considered the duty was a more workable scheme, though he had no objection to it being turned into a bounty, as long as it gave the local building firms adequate protection.

The commission adjourned to 10.30 a.m. next Monday.

FOOD PRICES.

DELAYED SHIPMENTS CAUSE TROUBLE.

The sittings of the Necessary Commodities' Commission was continued yesterday afternoon, at the Chief Secretary's Office, before Judge Edmunds and Commissioners A. H. Moore and M. J. Connington. Mr. Walter Bevan appeared for the Attorney-General.

Mr. Alexander Turnbull, (Sydney) manager of Robert Harper and Co. Proprietary, Ltd., said his firm had factories and mills in Brisbane, Sydney, Melbourne, and Fremantle, also a business in Adelaide. After the declaration of war they instructed their travellers to tell their customers that they would only make alterations in prices as necessity arose. The position now was that a number of shipments had been seriously delayed, but he thought they would come along later on, and he thought there would be no alteration in prices. No movement had taken place in coffee or cocoa, neither had there been an increase in the price of starch or mustard. They had fair stocks of rice, so they had kept prices unaltered. The export from Java would be stopped, but he did not think it would have an effect on prices. Tapioca and peppers had risen in price temporarily, but, as soon as supplies arrived, conditions would become normal. Values were lower than they were two years ago. Pearl barley and split peas were higher by £1 per ton since August 3. That was not due to the war. Witness said oatmeal had advanced £1 a ton in June, and 30s on August 3. Those rises did not compensate manufacturers for the rise that had taken place in oats. Owing to the great advance in wheat the market for wheatmeals would doubtless go higher. Two advances of 1d each had taken place in baking powder. That was due to the famine in cream of tartar.

The commission then adjourned.

FRESH AIR LEAGUE.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The 23rd annual report of the Fresh Air League was presented by the hon. secretary at the annual meeting, Town Hall, yesterday afternoon, the Lady Mayoress, Mrs. R. W. Richards, presiding. The financial help given during the past season included £10 interest on the legacy of £250 received from the trustees of the estate of the late Sir John Hay, and a second amount of £50 from the Walter and Eliza Hall trust account.

During the past season 86 children under 16 years of age, 11 between 16 and 21 years, 110 women and eight men have received the benefits of the league. Mothers with delicate infants have derived the greatest amount of good, 31 of these infants being under three years of age.

The country homes, situated in pleasant surroundings some distance from the railway, continue to give satisfaction. Thanks were expressed to the Moss Vale and Bowral branches of the Ministering Children's League for arranging holidays for applicants. The hon. secretary, Mrs. Geo. Kellick, read several letters of thanks from mothers of children, and from invalids who had benefited by the league's ministrations. The treasurer's (Mrs. A. A. Cohen) report showed a cash balance of over £185, £309 8s 6d having been disbursed for country board for recipients. Receipts for the year amounted to £379 3s 6d.

LATE MR. J. HOLMES.

Probate has been granted of the will of the late Mr. James Holmes, bank manager, of Bathurst, who died on June 23 last. The testator appointed his son Norman James Holmes, and his daughters, Clara Annie Holmes and Jessie Isobel Holmes, executor, executrices, and trustees of his estate, the whole of which he bequeathed to his widow and children.

The net value of the estate was sworn at £21,840 2s 3d, of which £17,862 12s 6d represented real estate.

IN THE GARDEN.

GORGEOUS FLOWERING CANNAS.

During the last summer and autumn no herbaceous plants produced a greater profusion of richly and variously coloured flowers over a longer period than the newer varieties of canna. Their principal characteristics are dwarf, compact habit, handsome massive foliage, relieved by several shades of colour, and large, brilliantly-coloured flowers. As decorative plants they have few equals, and no herbaceous perennials are more easily cultivated. In the coast and more favoured districts they attain perfection, but can be successfully grown in the colder parts if their tubers are protected in winter, or if the plants are lifted in late autumn, and the tubers stored in a fairly dry, frost-proof building, until the return of warm weather. Cannas are most accommodating plants, doing well in almost any situation sheltered from prevailing winds, but to attain their best they should be planted in an open sunny position, in deeply-worked, rich, friable loam. It is the right time to lift and divide the old stools, reserving only the younger and more vigorous portions of the tubers for re-planting, and to set out young cannas. They may be planted singly or in groups of three, at intervals in the borders, but when grown in a bed by themselves they produce a gorgeous effect in bloom, particularly if their colours are arranged to harmonise. The plants should be allowed plenty of room, for they are gross feeders. If grown in masses the taller varieties should be planted four feet apart, and the more dwarf ones from two to three feet apart every way. When the plants become well-established they should receive frequent supplies of water in dry, hot weather. An occasional watering of weak liquid manure at the roots will materially benefit the plants when flowering. If each stem is removed as soon as it has ceased to produce flowers, the vigour of the plants will be maintained, and the succeeding stems will produce fine blooms. The following varieties, with the colours of their flowers, are amongst the most beautiful in cultivation:—August Chantin, salmon red; Carl Hausman, delicate pink, stained yellow, with rich yellow margins; Fanny Siebert, bright yellow and crimson; Furst Wied, dark vermilion; Furstin G. Wallerstein, bright scarlet; Hungaria, large clear pink; Pander Schoot, bright yellow, heavily spotted, and blotched with scarlet; and R. Wallace, clear primrose yellow, lower petals splashed with magenta.

STATICE OR SEA LAVENDER.

Formerly the various species of statice, popularly called sea lavender, were more largely cultivated, and justly so. They are a most interesting class of plants, comprising dwarf, shrubby kinds, herbaceous perennials, and several annuals. All do well in the coast districts, and the annual kinds can be successfully grown in the open in summer on the tablelands. The prevailing colours of the flowers of the shrubby species are blue, pink, purple, and white; and of the herbaceous ones blue, bright red, lilac, pink, purple, yellow, and white; while those of annual duration are mostly rose and yellow. The perennials produce their flowers in profusion during the warmer months, and the annual in summer and autumn. It is now the seasonable time to plant sea lavenders, and if vigorous, well-rooted seedlings are set out they will soon begin to bloom. Seeds of the annual kinds may now be sown in the colder districts. All these plants thrive in an open, sunny situation in ordinary friable soil. The perennials show to advantage when planted singly at intervals in the borders, but the annuals produce the best effect in bloom when grown in a bed by themselves. When the latter are grown in masses they should be planted 12in apart. Statice suworowi is one of the most strikingly beautiful flowering annual sea-lavenders, and is worth a good position. It grows about 18in high, and produces numerous branching stems, densely covered with small, rose-coloured flowers. All the species of statice thrive under ordinary cultivation. The cut flowers of many of these plants last for a considerable time—indeed, they may be classed amongst the so-called everlastings, and can be dried and used for indoor decoration during the winter months, when fresh blooms are scarce.

NOTES.

The laurustinus, Viburnum tinus, is flowering very profusely this season, and producing a fine effect in the shrubbery. This South European evergreen shrub has long been cultivated, but rarely seen to greater advantage. There are several varieties of the laurustinus, a few having variegated leaves, and all are worth good positions. They thrive under ordinary conditions, and are suitable for planting in the colder as well as in the warmer districts.

A remarkable and handsome evergreen shrub, known to botanists as Ochna multiflora, is now producing a profusion of fragrant yellow flowers, and forming an attractive sight. The flowers will be succeeded later in the season by small, black fruit disposed on rather large, bright crimson receptacles, thus forming a charming contrast. This rather slow growing shrub, without a popular name, is a native of Sierra Leone, but thrives in ordinary soils in the neighbourhood of Sydney. It is well worth a good position, and does not require any special attention in the way of cultivation.

Many of the early flowering varieties of azalea and rhododendron are now in full bloom, and producing a very showy effect. These shrubs must not be allowed to suffer from the want of water at the roots, or their flowering period will be curtailed. Similar remarks as regards watering also apply to the later flowering varieties.

Daisies, pansies, polyanthuses, primroses, stocks, and similar early spring flowering plants should be regularly watered in dry weather, and if the soil in which they are growing is not rich an occasional watering of weak liquid manure at the roots will prove beneficial and prolong their flowering period.

Japanese irises are now putting forth new growth, and old stools should be divided and replanted in deep, rich soil in a sunny but sheltered position. Young plants may also be set out. These irises must have abundant supplies of water at the roots in dry, hot weather, or they will fail to freely produce their large, gorgeously coloured flowers. The Japanese irises can be grown to perfection as semi-aquatic plants, and they produce an exceptionally fine effect in bloom when grown on the margins of streams or ornamental sheets of water.

In the warmer and more favoured districts it is the seasonable time for sowing the seeds of the following annuals. If a large number of plants are required the seeds are best sown in a prepared seed bed, but where there is only room for a few seedlings the seed may be sown in seed boxes:—African and French marigolds, amaranthus, balsam, celosia (feathery and crested cockscombs), China aster, cosmos, portulacca (both single and double), salpiglossis, sunflower (both single and double), zinnias, etc.

GLASS HOUSE.

Owing to the increased heat of the sun's rays a light shade on the roof of the glass house will be necessary in the middle of fine days in order to protect delicate plants from direct light. Air should be freely admitted on warm, calm days, but the sashes should be closed early in the afternoon, in order to impound as much sun heat as possible, without, however, unduly increasing the temperature. Then freely syringe with tepid water palms, fine foliage plants, and robust-growing ferns.

All growing plants not in flower that require more pot room should now be re-potted according to the directions given in this column a fortnight ago for bushhouse plants.

Those beautiful flowering deciduous orchids, Calanthe veitchi and C. vestita, with its many charming varieties, will be greatly benefited by receiving an occasional watering of weak liquid manure at the roots now that their flowering stems are developing.

In order to provide plants for early flowering, the first batch of achimenes, begonia, and gloxinia tubers may now be started, also caladiums tubers to supply fine foliage plants. All the old soil should be carefully removed from the tubers, which should be re-potted in well drained pots, in a light, rich, open compost. If possible, plunge the pots containing the tubers into a gentle bottom heat, and do not water them until growth develops or the tubers may rot.

Cuttings of such tender soft-wooded plants as the brilliant flowering salvias, double flowering petunias, etc., that are largely used in garden decoration during the summer months, may now be inserted, and when they are well-rooted and inured to the open air temperature they may be planted in the positions where they are to bloom.

The club mosses, Lycopodium, and the giant mosses, Selaginella, should now receive attention. These plants show to advantage when grown in well-drained earthenware seed pans and hanging baskets, and they thrive in a compost consisting of one-third fibrous peat, one-third leaf mould, and the remaining third of equal parts of coarse sand and crushed charcoal.

Fresh, Pure, Crisp, Tasty, Arnott's Good Luck Biscuit, with that "Pure Butter" Flavour.—Advt.

WHAT ARE WE GOING TO DO?

The Germans are in front of Paris. The nation which for a hundred years has turned itself into a military machine has set itself in motion, and the machine is acting like clockwork. Whilst other nations have been busy building up Arbitration Courts, enacting payment of members, gradually breaking down the old feudal distinctions between classes, the German nation has thought war and lived war. It has bound itself heart and soul to a military routine. The nation has acquiesced whilst the military officer rides over it like so much dust—spurns it in the street, flouts it in the cafe, lives as though the rest of the world were made for him and his business. The nation has deliberately been turning itself into a huge machine, with one clear, concrete object. And now, when France and Britain—Britain a sheer amateur at the task—have cast themselves in front of the gigantic wheels, can it be wondered that the wheels have gone on moving? The machine has been working for a month in spite of them without any apparent clog. The little British army, a perfect instrument of its kind, has been flung in the front of it without hesitation, if only in order to save the French from being entangled and crushed, and to give the rest of us in this Empire time to collect our slow thoughts. It has been horribly mauled in the process, man-handled, buffeted, battered, in tackling this oncoming monster; but it has done its duty to the letter. It is no longer the neat, compact instrument that it was—the rough and tumble into which it went at our order three weeks ago has left its mark upon it. But it is there still; and we know exactly what it is doing at this moment. The regiments that fought at Dettingen, and Albuera, and Waterloo, they are there struggling, panting, holding on, retiring inch by inch, fighting all the way, with one object—to give us time to come up and help them finish the fight.

And what is our nation going to do? Many people conceive of the French as a nation given to "dropping its bundle" as soon as things begin to look really bad. Well, in 1870, the French nation, single-handed, was confronted by the same Power which is invading its country to-day. On September 3 the French nation heard that its Emperor, with an army of 80,000, had surrendered to the Germans at Sedan. A fortnight before it had heard that a much greater army had been rounded up into Metz. It had actually only one Army Corps of regular troops, the 13th Corps, left. Between the Germans and Paris there was nothing—except the armed villagers, who were prepared to fight the Germans at the cost of being shot in cold blood for spies and murderers whenever the enemy caught them. The great Prussian general staff, with the trained and invincible armies of the North German Confederation, was on the one hand, and a nation of untrained civilians on the other. There was not even an authorised Government—the Constitution had fallen with the Emperor. Under those circumstances, what did this French nation do? Its one Army Corps, which was at Mezieres, hurried straight for Paris. It found its way already blocked by the Germans, but it swerved rapidly along another route, and got safely home. Paris had at that time only one line of detached forts. It had been intended to build another line on an outer ring of hills, but these earthworks had only been begun. The remnant of the army tried to hold these hills, but was quickly driven out, and, instead, this ring of hills became an excellent position for the Germans. Did the French nation—with the worries of a revolution on top of all its other difficulties—meekly take what terms the Germans chose to give it? It told the Germans: "We shall not cede an inch of our territory or a stone of our fortresses." The Government called the entire nation to arms. The Government being in Paris, the work of carrying on the war outside was entrusted to a "delegation," which set up its capital far to the south. Leon Gambetta, whose heroic activity kept France together through those months of disorganisation, actually had to leave Paris in a balloon in order to begin the work. Europe laughed at these ponderous efforts by civilians. They were made the butt of many a cheap sneer. But France managed to get together within a few weeks, from the districts not occupied by the Germans, an army of nearly 700,000 men. Its officers had never served. The whole staff had to be extemporised. New arsenals had to be organised, merchants attracted by liberal contracts or patriotic appeals to come forward and offer guns, clothing, and ammunition. Camps were formed all over the country for training, in spite of the fact that the German army was over-running many of the provinces. Every man from 20 to 40 was called on to serve. Such reservists as could be scraped together from the depots, such refugees from the broken armies as had leaked through into other parts of France, all the old retired soldiers were rolled in. Twelve army corps were established, and, in a manner, trained. France could not believe that Paris was doomed to fall. To the average Frenchman Paris was France—he was prepared to go to any length to save her. The great efforts went astray, it is true. Armies were directed upon ineffectual objects by commanders only half loyal to the Government, and wholly jealous of rival commanders. The concentrated thinking of the Prussian staff made a fool of all this patriotism. But nothing can ever obliterate the fact that France, by the way in which she met that hour of distress, rehabilitated herself amongst the greatest nations of the world.

That was what the French did. What are we going to do? We have sent abroad a small army, which has been rolled back, carefully avoiding defeat, fulfilling its duty to the letter—and looking all the time for the one and only circumstance that can save the situation and turn the fortune of the war—the arrival of constant and growing reinforcements. The British regular army was sent abroad to save the Allies from disaster until such a time as the armies now being raised in the Empire could be sent to its help. It has performed that duty literally and completely in the face of the most tremendous attack ever launched against British troops. It has been driven back inch by inch, but it has saved the French from rout. It is absolutely certain that but for the service which it has rendered the French defence must have ended in disaster. The fact that there is an unbroken line still facing the Germans, and keeping the opportunity open, day after day, for reinforcements to arrive and help them bring the German advance to a standstill, is due simply to the manner in which the British regular army has performed its duty. The regular army has done its part, and is waiting—anxiously, day after day—for us to do ours. And our part must be done, whatever it may cost in men and effort—let there be no mistake about that. We may not realise it yet, but the British Empire cannot afford to lose this war—it cannot make peace with safety if once France is beaten. Owing to our present command of the sea we might be able to obtain moderately easy terms for a patched-up, temporary peace, but such a peace would be more dangerous than war. If Germany crushes France, crushes Belgium, defeats Russia, gains a new port at Antwerp, then we must face the fact that her whole pent-up effort will be directed towards dealing with the British Empire later. If Germany comes out of this war stronger than she went in the time of the British Empire will come—and will come soon. At the best, nothing could prevent such an appalling competition in navy building within the next ten years as would break the nation in peace, if it did not in war. The only possible policy for the Empire, once having gone in, is to settle here and now with the nation which has deliberately set itself to upset the peace of the world.

THE TEMPER OF THE PEOPLE.

After a month of the greatest struggle in all history, no observer can repeat the warning addressed to the people of Canada against taking too light a view of the prospect before them. Canadians will always be able to look back with pride to the manner in which they have faced the supreme test of their loyalty to the Empire, and of their spirit as a nation. If their bearing has been light-hearted, their conduct has shown a readiness for action and for self-sacrifice which has astonished even those of their fellow-subjects who paid least attention to reports of party or racial divisions. In times of peace we had been told that Canada wished to dissociate herself from the dangers of a European system, and that a large portion of her farmers wished for nothing better than the enjoyment of their prosperity by themselves. In the hour of crisis these farmers, who were said to prefer the American flag to the British, have been the first to offer their services. The authorities have been besieged by volunteers, and men who were unable to go to the war themselves have shown unexampled generosity in their gifts. In Australia more than twenty thousand men have come forward to disprove the criticism that in this country we care for nothing but comfort. It is already clear that as many more will be needed if Australia is to take its full share in the defence of the Empire. We have no doubt that if the call is made the country will fulfil the promise of its responsible leaders. The spirit which Lord Brassey observed in the worst hours of the Boer war will not be wanting in face of a more serious danger. In South Africa Australians realised that the value of their services was not to be judged by their numbers in relation to the total forces engaged. In this war, too, they can do a service for which none of the British or Canadian regiments are as well fitted as themselves. Their countrymen who carry on the civil life of the Commonwealth will in their turn perform a special service to the Empire. Something, no doubt, is accomplished by men who carry on their ordinary work diligently, and without panic. But a large number of citizens can do more than that. While their friends and brothers are facing death they can give of their leisure and their wealth as some share in the national sacrifice. When the war is over no one of the Dominions will take an honourable place in the councils of the Empire unless it has proved its quality and its value in this crisis. Nor will any individual retain his self-respect or the respect of his fellows if he has stood by in idleness, enjoying the protection of other men. The best men to urge others to volunteer are those who themselves are taking the risks of war. But others who wish that they could share in this great enterprise, as every Englishman wished that he could have been on the field of Agincourt, can show by their example that they are conscious of the need for action and of the unity of the Empire in which they are active members.

The test of the importance of this struggle for the Empire and the world is to be found in the response of British subjects in India as well as in Canada and Australasia. There has been no finer proof of the value of the British system of government and the force of the British ideal than these spontaneous offers of people free to go or stay as they please. "Any fool can govern in a state of siege." Any ruler can lead his people to war, provided that their wills are trained to obedience to his, and their decision between peace or war may be coerced by his servants. The manner in which they fight may prove their courage, their stamina, and their love of country. It does not indicate a sense of the justice of their cause or their realisation of the value of national ideals. Under the British system the unanimity of parties, of races, and of dominions can have only one meaning. It means far more than gratitude for the protection of the British fleet, or an expectation of favours to come. Canada might still remain unmolested, though Belgium were to become a German State, and France a third-class Power. It means that consciously or instinctively the people of the Empire have realised what consequences would follow from the defeat of the Allies to themselves and to mankind. Europe would for the space of a generation fall under the ideals of the governing classes of Prussia, which were incarnate in Prince Bismarck, and were revealed in his writings and in his life. British readiness for competition would be exchanged for German exclusiveness, the British tradition of care for native races, and of sacrifice for their well-being, for the cruelty and extortion of the Prussian official. The Prussians, wherever they have gained the mastery, have shown the same spirit. There has been no thought of reconciliation or of treating the members of a conquered race as fellow-subjects. The confidence in the future shown by Great Britain in Canada and South Africa would have been interpreted in Germany as the belief of a fool or the pretence of a coward. Posen, where Prussian landlords have been imposed on a people robbed of their birthright, has exemplified the faults of the Prussian character, and will shortly in the presence of a Russian army demonstrate its effect. In Alsace the French have never been allowed to forget their humiliation. If there had ever been any weakening of their love of France it would have been sustained by the bearing of the soldiers appointed to keep them in subjection. The type of mind which produced the outrage at Zabern, and gained for its perpetrators the applause of a Crown Prince, has developed a fighting machine marvellously effective for the purposes of a war of aggression. But it has had the effect of stimulating hatred in every other civilised people. While the British, with all their faults, would be accepted as the arbiters of Europe, the Prussians would be tolerated neither as masters nor as allies. The spirit of France has given mankind freedom of thought, and has placed the deepest secrets of nature at the service of humanity. The British spirit has set the example of orderly self-government, of individual freedom, and of a profound confidence in the best instincts of subjects of the same Empire. The struggle now raging will decide whether the spirit of liberty or of despotism is to prevail in Europe, thence to influence the rest of the world. The soldiers who have died fighting in the allied ranks have as certainly fought for liberty as those great men who are commemorated in history as the martyrs of the Revolution. In their obscure graves they deserve no less honour than the scientists who have met their death in an effort to place the fruits of knowledge at the service of their fellow-men. Science is of value only so far as it prepares the way for a fuller and better life, and it is for the national and individual liberty, the essential condition of any life worth living, that these men are fighting when they withstand the Germans in France.

AUSTRALIA'S PART.

LOVE OF EMPIRE.

MR. MILLEN'S STATEMENT.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Minister for Defence this evening made a statement summarising the steps taken in Australia in connection with the war, in which he says, "When the first indication that the Empire might be engaged in war reached the Commonwealth, I expressed the belief that Australia would prove no fair-weather partner in the then impending conflict.

"What has been done since with the clear endorsement of the whole of Australia has amply justified that anticipation. Australia rejoices at the splendid spirit displayed by the people of the old land and at the patriotic efforts which are being made by Canada, New Zealand, and other parts of the Empire. She wishes the rest of the Empire to know that in this momentous struggle for liberty and national honour, the vigour of her manhood, the bounties of her soil, the resources of her economic organisation, have been and will be freely offered to help to maintain the glory and greatness of the Empire, and to battle for the righteous cause of freedom in which it is now engaged. We have already assumed responsibilities which have not yet fallen upon any other dominion.

"Quite apart from the steps which we have thought it necessary to take in order to preserve the integrity of Australia itself, and to protect her people from economic disaster, our task from the larger Imperial point of view has been a double one—to defend the flag in those outer seas and to rally to the motherland at the decisive point of conflict. Our geographical position has given us the privilege as well as the responsibility of assisting to safeguard Imperial interests, possessions, and shipping in the southern seas. Our fleet is now acting under the directions of the Admiralty, and includes the most powerful war vessel possessed by any of the belligerents, with the exception of Japan, in the Pacific. The events which have occurred since the commencement of the war provide an abundant justification not only for the Australian naval policy generally, but also for the retention in the Pacific by the Commonwealth Government of the capital ship of her fleet unit.

In the sudden emergency which arose the presence of his Majesty's ship Australia, supported by the other vessels of the Australian Navy, will, even if not a single shot is fired, have amply repaid all that Australia has in money and personal effort spent upon them. The fact that the first stage in the removal of German power in the Pacific has already been taken affords ample proof that the forces of the British dominions in the Pacific are not mere playthings. The partial mobilisation of several thousands of the citizen soldiers was completed in a rapid and efficient manner, which was a gratifying test, not only of the compulsory military service system upon which Australia embarked only four years ago, but also of the loyal and ready response of the members of the forces to the obligations imposed upon them.

The response to the call for volunteers for an Imperial Expeditionary Force of 20,000 men was immediate and enthusiastic. The men are now in camp, and although the organisation for the force had to be created ad hoc, the arrangements are well in hand, and the departure of the force may be expected at an early date. The war is probably destined to be a long one. We have accordingly taken steps to secure the enrolment of further volunteers, both for the purpose of replenishing wastage in the first force, and with a view to sending further contingents if necessary. Australia does not propose to lag behind amongst the units of the Empire in the sacrifices which must be made to secure a victory. The war is not yet over, and greater efforts may be needed than have yet been necessary. But we may confidently claim that Australia has already contributed in no small measure to the common obligations which she owes to the Commonwealth and herself.

There is, however, added to all she is doing an enthusiasm for and a love of Empire which will endure when the material aid now proffered has served its purpose in assisting to a complete and decisive victory.

NOT DOWNHEARTED.

PREMIER'S OPINION.

CONDEMNS THE "TIMES" SCARE.

The Premier is following the progress of the war, more particularly in France and Belgium, with the keenest interest.

Mr. Holman returned to Sydney yesterday from a week's visit to the country, and he said he could not too strongly condemn such alarmist and panic-stricken articles concerning the progress of the campaign as had appeared from the pen of the London "Times" war correspondent regarding the fighting between the British and Germans at Mons. "For a couple of weeks we did not hear, owing to the censorship, from the war correspondents, and when we did hear from this particular correspondent one felt what a good thing it was that they had been suppressed. His message came through to the country when I was at Inverell, and I devoted half an hour during my speech to allaying the general despondency that it was well calculated to produce. I took the message bit by bit, and showed that the whole thing was unreliable, and evidently that of a man who was overwhelmed, and had never seen a shot fired before. After the meeting several citizens of Inverell assured me that they felt much easier in their minds after listening to my comments on this message from Mons, the unreliability of which has been since proved to the hilt. Such scare cablegrams cannot be too much deplored. I personally have the greatest faith in the tactics being pursued by the Allies. The gallant manner in which the British conducted themselves at Mons will, I think, live in history, and their orderly retreat from a difficult position before they had time to entrench against overpowering odds, will, I am persuaded, form one of the finest chapters of the war."

PERSONAL.

Professor Woolnough, formerly of Sydney University, and now of Perth University, will leave Sydney by the Morea for Fremantle to-day.

Commissioner Hay, of the Salvation Army, accompanied by Colonel Horskins, Lieut.-col. Cain, and Captain Packer, arrived by the Niagara from London International Congress, en route for Melbourne.

A military wedding took place at St. Philip's Church yesterday afternoon, when Captain Ivan Mackay, of the 4th battalion of the First Infantry Brigade, which is leaving shortly for service abroad, was married to Miss Marjorie Meredith, daughter of Colonel Meredith, of Raymond Terrace.

NEAR PARIS.

Siege Precautions

ARMS AND FOOD.

FALL OF LEMBERG.

TERRIBLE AUSTRIAN LOSSES.

DEADLY MINES.

British Gunboat Sunk.

The censorship still casts a fog over the operations in France.

An official Communique issued in Paris at midnight on Thursday, however, states that the Allies had not been in contact with German troops, which had been reported to be in the Compiegne and Senlis region, between 25 and 35 miles north of Paris.

The President and Ministers and all the Ambassadors, with the exception of the United States representative, have left Paris for Bordeaux, and the Bank of France is about to be transferred.

Full preparations are being made for a siege, and General Gallieni, the Military Governor of Paris, declares his intention to defend the city to the last.

Lemberg, the capital of Galicia, has fallen before the southern Russian Army.

Apart from the enormous number of killed, the Austrians in Eastern Galicia have lost 40,000 men, who have been taken prisoners, including many Generals.

In East Prussia there are indications that after the Russian counter attack, following on the reverse at Osterloe, the Germans are now transferring their defence from the Thorn-Cracow front to the Posen-Cracow line.

The abandonment of the defence of the line of the river Warta represents a gain to the Russians, inasmuch as westward from the Warta to the Oder the German front is entirely exposed.

WAR BULLETIN.

PARIS READY FOR SIEGE.

THE PROCLAMATION.

Sir George Reid (High Commissioner) cables from London, September 3, 7.50 p.m.:—

"Official: The President of France and the Government have left Paris for Bordeaux. All the Ambassadors and Ministers have also left Paris. Only the United States Ambassador remains.

"President Poincaire has addressed the following proclamation to France:—'In order to watch over the national welfare it is the duty of public powers to remove themselves temporarily from Paris. Under command of its eminent chief the French army will defend the capital against the invader without peace or truce, without cessation or faltering. The sacred struggle for honour and for national reparation of violated right must continue. Endure and fight, while on the sea the British aid us by cutting off our enemy's communications with the world; and while the Russians continue their advance to strike a decisive blow at the heart of the enemy.'"

8.30 p.m.

"Official: The Germans continue to advance. The enemy has pushed back by sheer weight the allied left, including the British. The German attack, though still violent, is perceptibly weaker.

"German cavalry patrols reached Senlis yesterday, 12 miles from the outer fortifications of Paris, but were thrown back again to Creil. The enemy are holding their communications with the older reserve forces."

11.30 p.m.

"War Office reports the following additional British casualties:—Killed, 18 officers, 52 men; wounded, 68 officers, 312 men; missing, 80 officers, 4072 men. The missing includes unaccounted for, unwounded prisoners, and stragglers."

The following cable from Sir George Reid is dated Sept. 3, 9.15 p.m.:—

Further details of the Russian reverse in East Prussia show that the battle was fought near Osterode, with reinforcements which the highly developed reticulation of the German railways had made it possible to throw into the fighting line from the southern portion of Eastern Prussia. The Germans made a furious attack in superior numbers upon the Russian army, comprising two corps, which was exposed to terrific fire of the heavy artillery. The Russians suffered severe losses. Among the killed was the commander of the Russian army, General Samsonoff. The reverse was mainly due to the superiority of the German guns from Thorn and Graudenz, and cannot seriously affect the operations. The Russian offensive continues in the western portion of Eastern Prussia.

TORPEDO GUNBOAT SUNK

STRIKES MINE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The following cable has been received from Sir George Reid:—

It is officially reported that the torpedo gunboat Speedy and the steam drifter Liastell struck mines on Thursday morning 30 miles from the east coast, and sank. The majority of the crews have apparently been saved.

THE NAVIES.

ROVING GERMANS.

UNDERWRITERS' DEMAND.

LONDON, Sept. 4.

The underwriters demand that stronger efforts should be put forth to capture the few German cruisers now roving the seas. They are chiefly in the South Atlantic, and the underwriters fear for the safety of the Australian and New Zealand homeward bound boats and the outward bound River Plate steamers.

THE ARMIES.

WEDNESDAY'S FIGHTING

ALLIES TAKE OFFENSIVE.

PARIS, Sept. 3, 8 p.m.

A British officer who was wounded at Compiegne, states that the Germans were repeatedly repulsed on Wednesday with heavy losses, and that the Allies are now taking the offensive along a front of several miles.

PARIS, Sept. 4.

A Communique issued at midnight on Thursday states:—"Since yesterday the Allies have not been in contact with the enemy, reported to be in the Compiegne and Senlis region, to the north of Paris.

PARIS.

"DEFEND TO THE LAST."

PARIS, Sept. 3.

President Poincaire, the Ministers, and all the Ambassadors, except the representative of the United States, have gone to Bordeaux.

General Gallieni, the Military Governor of Paris, has proclaimed his intention to defend the city to the last.

It is announced that the Government will proclaim to-morrow the transfer of the Bank of France from Paris to Bordeaux.

Measures have been taken, by means of heavily-armed French aeroplanes cruising over Paris, to prevent further aeroplane attacks by the Germans.

LONDON, Sept. 3.

THE RUSSIANS.

CAPTURE LEMBERG.

OVERWHELMING VICTORY.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 3.

It is officially announced that Lemberg, the capital of Galicia, has fallen.

Sept. 4.

It is officially announced that apart from the enormous number of killed, the Austrians in East Galicia have lost 40,000 who were made prisoners. These included many generals.

The route of the Austrian retreat was so encumbered with carts, guns, and impedimenta, that the pursuers were unable to use the roads.

Altogether in seven days the Russians have taken 200 guns and 70,000 prisoners.

Upwards of half the Austrian army was fighting in southern Poland, their left flank being in close co-operation with two German army corps facing Breslau. The Austrian left sought to envelope the Russian forces in Poland, and the extreme right endeavoured to outflank the Podolia army corps, while in the meanwhile the main Austrian force was directed at the heart of the Russian position in Poland. But the enveloping movement on the west failed, and the Germans were withdrawn to the north to deal with the victorious Russian advance there.

Austria's centre at Lublin was vainly launched against Russia's finest battalions, while the extreme right also sustained terrible losses.

The worst blow was dealt by General Rouzsky. The latter's force, leaving Rovno, advanced south-west, spreading fanwise so as to involve the districts north and south of Lemberg, and threatening to cut the Lublin army's communications.

In order to parry this movement the Austrians transferred several army corps from the west side of the Vistula, and, moving them behind Lublin, hurled them at General Rouzsky's forces. This desperate onslaught was attended, as officially announced, by a whole series of disasters to the Austrians.

THE GERMAN RESISTANCE.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 4.

Osterode, the place where the Russians sustained a serious check at the hands of the Germans, is 75 miles south-south-west of Konigsberg, and 50 miles east of the fortress of Graudenz. General Sazonoff drove back the Germans last week to Osterode from Soldau, some miles to the south-east.

Fresh German troops are now daily appearing on the eastern front, the Landsturm replacing them in the west.

The twelve 42 centimetre guns, which were responsible for General Sazanoff's reverse at Osterloe, have also been brought up.

There are indications that after the Russians' counter attack, leading to the German retreat, the Germans are now transferring their defence from the Thorn-Cracow front to the Posen-Cracow line.

The abandonment of the defence of the line of the River Warta represents a gain to the Russians, inasmuch as westward from the Warta to the Oder the German front is entirely exposed.

BLOODSTAINED AERSCHOT.

LONDON, Sept. 4.

Stories of German brutalities are accumulating from all quarters.

An agent of the Belgian State railways now at Dieppe describes a cold-blooded massacre at the hands of the Germans at Aerschot.

He says that a boy, brooding on his country's wrongs, shot dead the German colonel who was in command there, whereupon all the men in the town, numbering 390, were driven into the church, and were then taken out in groups of three, and of every three one was taken at random, led away and shot.

The remaining 260 were forced under threats of a general massacre, to dig a huge grave in which to bury their kinsmen and townsfolk.

Later a villager fired a single shot, whereupon five of the hostages were shot by the Germans.

In addition to this many villagers were killed in indiscriminate volleys that were fired, and eventually the village was burnt to the ground.

This suggestion will probably be accepted.

ESPIONAGE.

They were marched to the nearest restaurant and compelled to act as waiters while their captors were eating.

The Germans soon became intoxicated, and the British, seizing the German arms, slew several of their captors, and escaped.

TRAITROUS CROSSING-KEEPER.

PARIS, Sept. 4.

Colonel de Bonhomme recounts that in one district, despite the rapidity with which the French guns changed their positions, it was noticed that the new spots chosen immediately became known to the enemy.

It was subsequently discovered that a railway-crossing keeper by means of a secret telephone was keeping the Germans informed of the movements of the French artillery. The man was instantly executed.

NERVE-RACKING NOISE.

LONDON, Sept. 4.

A sergeant-major, in a letter from the front, says:—"The worst about this war is not the fear of losing one's life, but the hellish nerve-racking noise.

"Townsmen, who are accustomed to noise, stand it much better than countrymen—in fact, those recruited from the big cities are far the fittest.

"One London lad told me," he adds, "that the noise was no worse than the roar of the omnibuses."

A LANCE-CORPORAL'S STORY.

LONDON, Sept. 3.

A wounded lance-corporal of the Connaught Rangers states:—"One disconcerting thing about the present fighting is that we seldom see the enemy. We lay ten hours in the trenches last Saturday, and rifle bullets were dropping among us like rain drops; but we only saw a line of white puffs of smoke on the horizon when the Germans fired. It was a big test to put up with this for a day without losing nerve. We were fighting for three days before we set eyes on a German; but then we had plenty of hand-to-hand fighting.

"When the Germans do come close they sacrifice men for the sake of making an impression in an appalling fashion. One British position was dominated by a German battery, and clearly could not have been held long, yet the German infantry attacked it in a long, never-ending stream. Our rifle and gun fire tore hideous gaps in their ranks, and the Red Cross men afterwards picked up in that position alone 1600 German dead and wounded. The British loss was actually only 20.

"We are wondering how long the Germans can keep up this sort of thing."

ANOTHER AIR DUEL.

WAR NOTES.

ON TO PARIS.

The Allies are still slowly retreating on to the line of the Paris forts—by this time they are probably within it. The Germans have arrived at Senlis and Campeigne—where the British were fighting hard upon Sedan Day; and the northern fortifications of Paris are only a dozen miles or so to the south of this.

WILL NOT BE SHUT UP THERE.

It may be taken as certain that the field armies of the Allies will not remain in Paris unless they are forced to. The regular garrison of Paris consists of 40 regiments of infantry, 12 of cavalry, and 5 of artillery. A very large reserve citizen force will, of course, strengthen this, but otherwise the fewer months in Paris the better. The French learnt in 1870 the danger of allowing an army to be shut up in a fortified town. The army which falls back on Paris will probably move through the city across the Seine bridges, and take position south of the river. Paris will become a point in the allied line. If the line is forced further back it will leave Paris to be besieged rather than be shut up there. The 350,000 men, said to be necessary to defend Paris, would probably largely consist of local troops. It should take between 500,000 and 1,000,000 to invest Paris effectively.

TO STAND THE SIEGE.

In 1870 Paris had, at the beginning of the siege, 3000 oxen, 6000 pigs, and 180,000 sheep. But before the siege was ended the Parisians were eating rats. The population was then about 2,000,000. To-day it is 2,888,110. The city has grown a great deal, and the old forts which became famous at the time of the siege, are now in the centre of suburbs—but a new ring of forts has been built much further out. The fortifications are explained in detail in the footnote to our map and need not be further explained here.

BOMBARD OR ATTACK?

The Germans in 1870 had four courses open to them—to sit down around Paris and starve it, to attack it from all sides, to destroy the forts with artillery, or to bombard the town. They had only 150,000 men at first available to surround the city with—about one man per yard. But as bombarding the town would have brought down on them the displeasure of Europe, and the other means were too expensive, they decided to starve Paris out, and, if necessary, attack it when they could bring up the troops left behind besieging Metz. To-day it does not much matter to Germany if the world is angry at a bombardment—there is scarcely a country left outside whose anger matters unless it be the United States. The choice will therefore probably be between reducing the forts by artillery, bombardment, or a straight-out attack. The allied forces are probably too strong for the Germans to invest Paris immediately. For bombardment the Germans have now their new siege guns. The guns used against the Russians are now reported by the Russians to be 42 centimetre—17-inch.

THE REINFORCEMENTS FROM INDIA.

It was on Friday, August 28, yesterday week, that Lord Kitchener stated in the House of Lords that the British Government had decided to send "two infantry divisions and a cavalry division besides other troops from India" to reinforce the British troops abroad. He went on to say that "two divisions of Indian native troops would be employed, and one division was already on its way." Clearly this cable may mean two things. The two infantry divisions and cavalry division first referred to may be the Indian troops, and the "other troops from India" may mean artillery, engineers, army service corps, and other troops, which would naturally be sent with them; or it is possible to read the message to mean that two infantry divisions and a cavalry division are being sent from England over and above two native infantry divisions from India. In the one case these reinforcements would mean 50,000 troops from Britain and about 40,000 from India—an army corps from each. In the other case there would be 50,000 from India and none from Britain.

WELL ON THEIR WAY.

The Indian reinforcements must be well on their way by now. If they were on their way from India on Friday week they cannot be much more than a week from the front at the present moment. These troops would surely be landed at Marseilles, and hurried to the front from there. During the earlier movements of the armies, when the French railways were very much occupied with the concentration of the French army itself, the British troops marched to the front—in accordance with ordinary military theory by which, if there is any crush upon the railways, the troops would always be expected to march to their positions, and leave the railways free for the carriage of supplies. It will be noticed, however, that the British reinforcements which were sent last week to France were forwarded to the front in troop trains.

THE DARK-BLUE UNIFORMS.

The reinforcements sent to the British Army last week were probably only the reservists who would not have had time to join their regiments before the Expeditionary Force left, and who were sent on to join afterwards. The German Army since it took the field must also have been brought up in very much greater strength by the arrival of its reserves. The men who are now reported to be arriving in Belgium in dark-blue uniforms are the "Landsturm," the final reserves of the German Army. These are in all probability being placed on the lines of communication, although the Russians believe that the reserves must be taking up in France the work of troops who have been recalled in East Prussia to face them.

THE RESERVISTS IN EAST PRUSSIA.

Only a certain portion of the German reserve goes towards filling up the regiments in the army of the first line. The reserve in the second stage forms the Landwehr, or Second Line army. The bulk of the troops first sent into East Prussia to oppose the Russians probably belong to the Landwehr, and these troops will still be there. But it is unlikely that the Germans will employ the Landsturm—that is, men between 39 and 48, as well as all those between 17 and 39, who for any reason have received no military training—in their main attack in France. Possibly some German corps have been withdrawn from Alsace Lorraine or Luxemburg to oppose the Russians.

THE RUSSIAN CENTRAL ARMIES.

The Russians, by winning the great battle which they have been waging against the Austrians in the south, have forced the Germans automatically to retire from the line of defence which they first took up. It has been something of a mystery that not the least word has so far been heard of the main central Russian armies, with the exception of the one which appeared opposite Thorn, about September 1. Although an advance towards Posen had been hinted at from St. Petersburg, Russian troops had not yet been reported at a single point on the frontier south of Thorn. They were not due there till September 5, but should surely have been heard of before they actually reached the frontier. The mystery is now clearly solved by a message which shows that the central German army, and probably an Austrian army also, in this district has been lying along the River Wartha, on a line from Thorn to Cracow; that is to say, that so far from the Russians having invaded German territory with their central armies, the Germans and Austrians were well out into Russian territory waiting for the Russian central army to advance. The smashing blow which the Russians in the south have now given to the troops on the Austrian flank has forced the German defending army to retire to its own border, and take up a line from Posen to Cracow. Now at last we shall probably hear something of Russian troops arriving near the Prussian frontier in the neighbourhood of Posen, and probably fighting a battle there. September 5 was the date about which this portion of the Russian centre was due to reach the frontier; and so far the Russian movements have coincided, as if by clockwork, with the times which they were expected to occupy by French military writers.

THE "GUNBOAT" SPEEDY.

The torpedo-gunboat Speedy, which has been blown up by a mine, is one of a class of obsolete vessels which had been transformed by the Admiralty for use as a mine-sweeper. There are some dozens of these small ships, which have been regularly practised in experimental work as mine-sweepers during peace time. The torpedo gunboat was a class of ship originally designed as a defence against torpedo boats, at a time when the French Navy largely relied upon its torpedo craft, and when there was some anxiety as to how the big ships of the British battle fleet could protect themselves against this small fry in war. Small ships of 1000 to 2000 tons were built and armed with light guns, with a view to chasing and warding off torpedo craft; but their speed was only 19 to 21 knots, and they were never capable of running down a torpedo boat. It was after their failure that the "torpedo-boat-destroyer"—really an enlarged torpedo boat—was first invented, and the torpedo gunboat at once became obsolete. The Speedy was clearly sunk by striking a mine whilst in the act of mine-sweeping.

GIFTS OF PRODUCE.

HIGH PRICES REALISED.

Mr. A. Caple, of Derra Derra, Bingara, who a short time ago consigned a truck of wheat to Sydney to be sold by auction for patriotic purposes, expressed his appreciation of the buyers in a practical manner by sending another truck of prime wheat to Sydney yesterday to be also sold at auction, and the proceeds to be divided between the Patriotic Fund and the Belgian Fund.

At the railway forage and grain sales the second truck was offered by Messrs. Dalgety and Co.

Before the wheat was offered Mr. A. S. Black addressed the large crowd, and the National Anthem was lustily sung. The truck, which contained 96 bags, was next offered, and was "knocked down" at 65s per bag to Messrs. Ramson, Black, Shepherd Harvey, Walker and Oxby, all of whom purchased several bags. The remainder of the wheat, with the exception of one bag, was sold to Messrs. G. Turner, A. Edwards, M'Donald and Sneddon, N.S.W. Produce Company, A. Blackmore, Boyd and Hanlon, H. A. Perry, and Henderson's, at prices ranging from 50s to 55s a bag.

One bag only remained, and this was offered to the crowd. Bidding was very brisk, and the bag was finally sold to Messrs. Yeldon Bros. for £5.

Mr. Yeldon offered the wheat again, and it was bought and sold 36 times at prices from 21s to £2 2s, and was eventually purchased by Messrs. Watson and Noble for £3 1s.

The buyers responsible for the offering and re-offering of the single bag were Messrs. Campbell, H. M. Gibbons, M'Lune, Edwards, R. Robinson, Taylors, Ltd., Hunter and Co., Moroney and Fleming, H. C. Stephens, M'Rae and Co., M. Summers, A. M'Dermott, Campbell Bannerman, R. Pennington, Crocker and Barrett, J. Cogian, Suttor and Co., G. Ternan, J. Bell, Herries, W. Boshell, Blacksham, Lindley Walker, A. Blackmore, Foley Bros., Cameron and M'Fadyen, T. C. Davis, J. Walker, Smith Bros., T. Douglas, R. J. Mulholland, W. Donaldson, F. Johnson, and Dent and Perry. In all a sum of £74 12s was paid for the single bag of wheat.

The patriotism of the buyers may be well seen when it is explained that the market price of prime wheat is 4s 9½d per bushel, and the bags sold contained a little over three bushels each. The total sum realised for the full truck was £225 7s, which certainly speaks volumes for the patriotism of the Sydney and suburban produce dealers.

A truck of Nemingha lucerne hay also was given by Mr. Harry Walker, and was sold by auction to the buyers at the railway.

Bidding was spirited, and the truck was sold to Messrs. J. M'Donald, H. Walker, H. Byrnes, W. Summers, W. Campbell, E. W. Gordon, and R. Pennington at £10 per ton.

It contained six tons or thereabouts, so that a substantial figure was realised.

WHAT THE SOLDIER NEEDS.

These cost 6s 6d, and the receiving depot can supply first-class articles. Balaclava caps and woollen underclothing would be acceptable. Woollen gloves are necessary. Any healthy literature would be appropriate, also correspondence requisites—pencils, paper, envelopes, and post or letter cards. Red Cross extra kit bags and any Red Cross articles are needed. Donations in money or kind may be addressed to Captain John Dart, C.M.H., 139 Castlereagh-street, Sydney.

THE EXPEDITION

AT SEA.

ON BOARD THE BERRIMA.

AUSTRALIAN TROOPS.

(BY OUR SPECIAL COMMISSIONER.)

Aug. 20.

When you have once become accustomed to the novelty of living in an atmosphere of uniforms and bugle-calls, you are apt to discover the life on a troopship is very much like life on any other ship; except that, owing to the monotony of the daily routine of parades, drills, rifle-instruction, and so on, it is rather more dull. Morning parade begins at 9, and continues till 12, and afternoon parade continues from 2 to 4; and during those five hours the traffic is obstructed by a large number of serious-minded people in khaki or navy blue, who do the same things day after day with a spirit of apparently exhaustless enthusiasm. The enthusiasm is the more commendable because since leaving Sydney the Berrima has been pursued by an unpleasantly cold and unnecessarily violent wind, and her equilibrium in consequence has been considerably upset. It is not easy for, say, 50 men, all hampered with overcoats and rifles, to stand in a beautifully unbroken line on a deck whose angle of incidence perpetually shifts and veers, and to those who have quitted the dry land for the first time the consequences are apt to be even painfully disastrous. During the first day of the Berrima at sea the most hard-hearted of Prussian generals must have melted at the sight of the sea-change suffered by the first expeditionary force, a large proportion of whose members cast their bread upon the waters with more than Christian liberaliness. The long line of seeming corpses stretched on the deck, impervious alike to threats or sarcasm, suggested the aftermath of an engagement. "Private Dessay!" yelled a sergeant in search of one of his flock. "Where's Private Dessay?" But Private Dessay was beyond the reach of sergeants. "Dessay he's dead by this time," grimly jested a fellow-sufferer, with a facial contortion between a smile and a grimace. Sometimes even for the men who were well, drill was rendered practically impossible by the sea's antics, and it was a ludicrous spectacle to see a whole half-company, as a huge wave rolled the liner on her side, go sliding and staggering across the deck, wildly embracing each other or anything else, before fetching up with a bump against the bulwarks. But, indeed, the expedition found its sea-legs with astonishing celerity, and the routine of the following day proceeded with scarcely any further "casualties."

What with concerts, lectures, sparring contests, pistol practice, and endless speculations on our aim and destination, the expedition keeps its spare time well occupied. The receipt of a large consignment of copies of the "Sydney Morning Herald" on the morning of departure was appreciated with very genuine gratitude by everybody on board. One little local incident has also done much to relieve the tedium of the daily round and common task. A certain august personage told his orderly or "batman" to come down to the officer's mess, meaning, of course, the orderly was to supply his needs during the meal. The hour arrived, but not the man. The hungry august personage fumed and fidgetted, but the orderly was nowhere to be seen. When the orderly, who had interpreted his orders as an informal invitation to lunch in the mess-room, was eventually discovered in a corner enjoying a hearty meal, waited on by two stewards, the entire mess dissolved in Homeric mirth, while the august personage explained the facts of the case to the crestfallen "batman" with an emphasis that left no further room for misapprehension.

August 27.

"Hurrah, hurrah, we're on the Berrima!
"Hurrah, hurrah, we don't know where we are!
We're volunteers for service from our own Austral-i-a.
When we set out to capture Pap-u-a!"

sang the expedition joyfully a few evenings ago at a concert on the after-deck; but if our ultimate destination is still to some extent shrouded in the mists of mere conjecture, our actual whereabouts are, for the present, clear enough, for here lies the Berrima. Into the pale blue sky, misted over with heat like a mirror that someone has breathed upon, half a dozen islands climb up out of the water to eight or nine hundred feet, covered, for the most part, with dense forest from base to summit. They are deceptive places, these; islands of illusion, with little white beaches, like white-limbed sea-maidens, luring you to land; but as you come closer, you perceive that, behind the little beaches lurk the grim black claws of evil-smelling mangrove swamps, and the slopes that seemed so easy to climb are seen to be of break-neck steepness, where the long, thick grass, waist-high, only increased the slipperiness of the huge basalt boulders that tower above your head. At one point only the hills fall away, and leave a small area comparatively level, though even here it is impossible to go far without either tumbling into a swamp or finding oneself confronted with a wall of jungle impracticable to any but the most indomitable of pioneers.

The obvious necessity for maintaining the utmost secrecy as to the movements and objective of the expedition naturally involved, not only a strict censorship, but hitherto the absolute suppression of all private correspondence, when there was an opportunity to post it.

Letters may now be sent to the Expedition with a full assurance that they will really arrive, sooner or later, at their destination. All letters addressed to N. or M., as the case may be, Australian Naval and Military Force, on Active Service, will be forwarded by the authorities to their proper quarter. Those who address their epistles to the First Australian Expedition, or even the First Australian Imperial Expeditionary Force, which has been asserted to be the expedition's correct title, will only have themselves to blame if the missives wander away to regions wholly unintended by the senders. . . .

Where the level ground, already referred to, comes down to the sea, a line of coconnut palms and pawpaw trees sheltering a white-washed and leaf-thatched group of bungalows awaits the holiday-making or honey-mooning folk who come every year to avoid the heat and burden of the summer months; but never before have these islands seen so large a population on their shores, nor one with such a swashing and a martial aspect. Every day, to the strains of a stirring war song beginning—a long string of boats heads for the shore, generally disgorging their burden at a rocky point which, in compliment to a leading member of the force, has been christened after his name. An exceeding toilsome "march," a catch-as-catch-can sort of scuffle over an intolerably steep and rocky hillside may be so dignified, brings the perspiring warriors to a mangrove swamp, an arduous passage through which leads the war-worn army to the Promised Land, that is to say, the bungalows, where the cows stray under the pawpaws and coconnuts. This peaceful scene is at once changed into an area where fire and sword rage unchecked until dinner time, after which hostilities are resumed in full fury. At 5 o'clock orders are given for returning to the ship, and here the fun begins. The tide by this time has retired for hundreds of yards, leaving a beautiful expanse of brown and buttery mud, with large and uninviting lumps of jagged coral sticking up here and there. It is not attractive to the eye as a spot for a promenade. But the boats are waiting in the offing, and puttees, boots, and socks being reluctantly hauled off, and trousers hoisted as high as possible, the invaders cross the mud flats and wade splashing through the water till the boats are reached. It is an exhilarating spectacle, and, as one might expect, gives rise to a rapid crossfire of good-natured chaff, followed by a hotly-rowed race between boat and boat back to the ship.

Now, militiamen,
Row like fishermen;
Pull, boys, pull!

Apart from the lighter side of the question, however, it is in the highest degree encouraging to observe how admirably the expedition is shaping into a fighting machine of first-rate efficiency. Considering the rapidity with which the force was got together, it is astonishing that in so short a time, officers and men should have gained so complete an understanding of, and confidence, in each other, and the men who, a few weeks ago, possessed few military qualities other than a whole-souled enthusiasm, should already have attained a degree of competency and training of which any army in the world might feel proud. The very nature of the island precludes any very extended manoeuvres, and even within the area of operations the country is not only exceedingly difficult, but utterly foreign to any country within the previous experience of the men; but without exception the troops have succeeded in keeping touch, maintaining their communications, and carrying out every order with intelligence, precision, and without loss of time. The Australian soldier will go anywhere and do anything, if he has the right man to lead him, and he is quick to notice and resent any attempt to impose upon him, as he is equally ready to acknowledge and repay with interest qualities of sympathy and manliness in his superiors. "Waded through the swamp, did you?" said one yesterday to a returned member of a landing party. "Did the officers go in, too?" and the brief "Ah" of satisfaction which followed the affirmative reply, was eloquent in its approval.

As one goes from hospital to dispensary, from storeroom to hold, one sees everywhere big boxes of clothing, bundles of mosquito netting or cheese-cloth, medicines, surgical equipments, and innumerable other essentials marked with a large red cross, quite apart from the admirably comprehensive supplies issued by the Government. Not once, but many times, have I been asked to make public acknowledgment through the columns of the "Herald" of the debt of gratitude which the force owes to the splendid generosity and self-sacrifice of the women of the Red Cross League, who worked untiringly night and day to provide a hundred adjuncts to the comfort and welfare of the troops. It is a debt which everyone in the expedition likes to think can never wholly be repaid.

IN THE EAST.

S.S. EMPIRE CHARTERED.

Mr. S. R. Fletcher, of Manly, third officer of the E. and A. S.S. Company's steamer Empire, which has been chartered by the Admiralty, writes to his parents as follows:—

"H.M.S. Empire,
"Hongkong Naval Department,
"August 12.

"Things are very serious out here now, and last Tuesday Captain Pilcher in his hearty way called us up and said: 'Look here, this ship has been taken over by the Admiralty, and anyone can get out if he wants to.' It was the way he said it. A man had to stop. The engineers, however, were exchanged for a double shift from the Aldenham, our lot taking their places.

"Where the China fleet is no one knows. We are loading as fast as we can, and with orders to sink the Empire rather than be captured by the Germans, whose stronghold, as you know, is Tsingtao. The China squadron left for goodness knows where. We are to sail under sealed orders on Wednesday. I wish this ship was going to be fitted with guns, and we were going into action. It would be just right to go away with the fleet to capture the Germans.

"Our only worry will be two cruisers, the Scharnhorst and the Gneisenau. They are knocking about somewhere, but where we do not know. There is a naval lieutenant on board this ship with 14 petty officers armed to the teeth, and we are going to be given a rifle each and 60 rounds of ammunition. Yesterday for my own revolver I bought 500 rounds, but I wish I had some target practice, as I am afraid I am not much of a shot. Please do not worry. We shall be all right out here.

"We have all signed articles for 18 months to the navy, so I cannot be home for that time at least. Hongkong is under martial law now, and they are not building all these barricades for nothing."

PRIZE COURT.

PRELIMINARY STEPS.

An initial proceeding in connection with the Prize Court, which was recently constituted here by proclamation in the Gazette, took place before the Chief Justice in Chambers yesterday, his Honor sitting in Admiralty Jurisdiction. An application was made by Mr. H. E. Manning, instructed by the Commonwealth Crown Solicitor, for an extension of time for swearing and filing affidavits as to ships' papers in connection with the ships Melbourne, Osnabruck, Sumatra, Stolzenfels, Germania, Athene, Tiberius, Susanne Vinnen, Carl Rudgert Vinnen, Olinda, Wotan, Turul, and Berlin.

Order made in each case extending the time for swearing and filing affidavits until Monday, September 7. Leave to make further application if necessary.

CARGO FOR AUSTRALIA.

DETAINED AT CAPETOWN.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Since the outbreak of the war three German vessels have been seized at Capetown. These steamers have on board for Australia cargoes from Germany and New York, valued at about £60,000. The Minister for External Affairs (Mr. Glynn) last night received a deputation from the Melbourne Chamber of Commerce, representing about 200 consignees, and the Minister was asked whether arrangements could be made for the cargoes to be brought to Australia. It was suggested that means might be found for allowing the ships to be brought on to Australia by prize crews.

In reply, the Minister stated that the matter was now within the jurisdiction of the Prize Court of South Africa, and it was for those interested to submit their claims to the Court. The Government had already communicated by cable with the South African Government to see whether something could not be done in these matters.

A reply was expected on Friday. If it was not satisfactory he would cable to the High Commissioner in order to draw the attention of the Imperial Government to the question.

A cable was received from Lloyd's agents at Capetown yesterday stating that claims in connection with the German steamers Hamm, Apolda, and Birkenfels must be lodged with the Prize Court, Capetown, by September 6.

MERCHANT SHIPS.

ALDENHAM'S VOYAGE.

The steamer Aldenham, which arrived from Japan, via ports, yesterday, received news of the outbreak of hostilities while at Hongkong.

The Aldenham reached Hongkong on July 29, and discharged 400 tons of Japanese produce there. The steamer had commenced loading her Australian cargo when an order was received to discharge all cargo, as the vessel had been requisitioned by the Admiralty.

All cargo was accordingly taken out of the vessel with the exception of 50 tons of sulphur, and then fresh orders were received to re-load all cargo and proceed to Australia as fast as possible, as another steamer had been taken in place of the Aldenham. About 2000 tons of Japanese cargo was, therefore, reloaded, as well as 800 tons from Hongkong. The vessel was preparing to leave Hongkong on August 5 when orders were received to remain there and await further instructions, as it was not deemed safe to proceed owing to German warships having been reported to be cruising about the Eastern Archipelago.

The Aldenham eventually left Hongkong at 3 p.m. on August 14. No lights were allowed to be exhibited at night time during the remainder of the voyage, and the Aldenham gave a wide berth to all other vessels.

A large steamer was sighted at 7 p.m. on August 18. She was steaming very slowly, and heading north. The vessel was believed to be the N.D.L. liner Princess Alice, which was reported to have been armed with guns, and had left Manila on August 13 for an unknown destination.

FREIGHTS.

REDUCTION OF WAR SURTAX.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

According to a cable message received today by Melbourne shipping firms from the head offices in London, it has been decided to reduce the war surtax on freights on cargoes to and from Australia from 25 to 20 per cent.

The Orient Company has received notification that the R.M.S. Orama, now in London, has been withdrawn from their Australian service.

EFFECT ON TRADE.

DISTRESS AT BROKEN HILL.

BROKEN HILL, Friday.

The position in Broken Hill in regard to the unemployed was strained most of yesterday, but eased off later when it became known that, though the issue of relief coupons was to be stopped, the Government intended to start extra relief works through the City Council, and gave indications also of its intention of proceeding with the Condobolin railway. The crowd of out-of-works had decided to burn Mr. Cann's effigy in Argent-street yesterday afternoon, but, although a great crowd gathered in the vicinity of the Trades Hall, nothing at all happened. The Distress Relief Committee met twice yesterday, and when it received wires that certain municipal works were to be carried out, and that no more money was to be sent for coupon relief, it adjourned sine die. The committee, however, will meet any time the necessity arises. Mr. Cann wired to Mr. W. D. Barnett, the secretary of the A.M.A., last night, in reply to the resolution of the Trades Hall meeting, that he was not a coward, and would neither resign his position in Parliament nor as a member of the Cabinet.

RELIEF WORKS.

STATEMENT BY THE PREMIER.

This morning the Government is telegraphing £1000 to Broken Hill as a loan for relief works. Meanwhile 1000 men are being brought from the Barrier to be employed on the North Coast railway works at half-time, in pursuance with the scheme already prepared. Mr. Holman (the Premier) stated last night that the Government was grappling with the situation in other respects, and he would probably make a statement in the House of Assembly on Wednesday. He said that during August the Government had spent £25,000 more than in the corresponding month of 1913, which, considering that loan supplies were cut off, showed that everything was being done to keep public works in progress and relieve unemployment.

LITHGOW, Friday.

The local coal trade continues good. Work has been brisk at the Cooerwull Mills, chiefly on orders for cloth for the troops.

FOOD PRICES.

PROPOSED EMBARGO ON EXPORT.

MINISTER EXPLAINS.

The Chief Secretary (Mr. Cann) made the following statement yesterday:—"My attention has been drawn to the statement which appeared in yesterday's press to the effect that Mr. Gillespie, of Messrs. Gillespie and Co., when giving evidence before the Necessary Commodities Control Commission, said that some time ago he had made a suggestion to the Government through me that the export of wheat from the State should be prohibited until it had been ascertained whether the season would prove a good one, and he is reported to have added that nothing had been done with regard to his suggestion.

"If Mr. Gillespie made that statement, his premises are incorrect. The question of placing a prohibition on the export of wheat is a matter for Federal, and not State, decision, and Mr. Gillespie's suggestion was communicated to the Prime Minister of the Commonwealth, with a request that it might be accorded early and careful consideration."

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Premier (Sir Alexander Peacock) today appointed two officers from the Public Service to make inquiries in connection with the export of foodstuffs.

SOUTH AUSTRALIAN QUOTA.

REVIEWED BY GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

The Governor-General reviewed the troops at Morphettville to-day. Sir Ronald Ferguson addressed the members of the force. His Excellency said:—

"The whole future of the Empire depends upon the defeat of a strong and arrogant and unscrupulous foe. The fate of free institutions is in the balance against military tyranny. I shall be able to report, and shall report, to the King that his Australian forces have lost no time in preparing themselves to come into line with his regiments that are already upholding the renown of the British arms at the front, and that have stood the first shock of the battle. It is for you now to win his thanks through glorious triumph."

CRICKETERS' HELP.

At a special meeting of the New South Wales Cricket Association yesterday afternoon a letter was received from Mr. Austin Diamond suggesting that all cricketers, other than those already undergoing military training, should offer themselves for training, and it was agreed that a committee, consisting of the president, Mr. J. H. Clayton, Mr. Sydney Smith, jun., and Mr. F. M'Mullen, should interview the military authorities with a view to carrying out Mr. Diamond's suggestion.

The suggestion that a trial match between a first eleven and the next best team on November 21 and 28, the proceeds to be handed to the Patriotic Fund, has been approved.

OUR TROOPS.

CONTINGENT No. 2.

OLD CAMPAIGNERS OFFERING.

AGE LIMITS ALTERED.

If one thing more than another is causing uneasiness to those who have command of the divisions of troops it is the happy-go-lucky methods believed to be adopted by some of those of the ranks who allow themselves to run loose when on leave in the city. A warning is issued by high authority to the effect that if certain forms of illness due to excesses or misbehaviour should develop in the early stages of the homeward voyage of the ships, the sufferers will be landed at the first port.

Now that the age for acceptance of applicants has been raised to 45 years many who fought and won distinction in the Boer war of 14 years ago will be eligible for enrolment in the second contingent. This decision has been received with considerable satisfaction by the army officials, and has already resulted in the acquirement of some staunch material to mix with the young recruits. There were 170 enrolments at the barracks yesterday, and Lieutenant-Colonel Antill was evidently delighted to find enrolment papers being handed in by those who had either served under him or in some other way had come under his official notice in South Africa. "You will have a hard time of it," he remarked in a sort of confidential way. "We know it" was the invariable reply the men gave as they passed out to have their enrolment registered.

Each applicant under 20 years of age must in future bring with him the written authority of his parent or guardian (wherever such is possible) before his case will be considered by the enrolling officer. With this understanding, the age for recruiting is now reduced to 18 years. Major Timothy, who is known as Lieutenant-Colonel Antill's "offside," passed some good youths yesterday morning while the colonel was away at the luncheon given by Mr. David Reid, the general manager in Australia for the Orient Royal mail line of steamers, on board the R.M.S. Orvieto, lying at Circular Quay. These young men will be given time at home to accustom themselves to climatic conditions before being sent to the front.

DETECTIVES AT THE GATES.

Steps are being taken to ensure that no persons of disreputable character shall leave Australia in troopships. The scrutiny now is even more perfect than it was before—though the officers will admit that the first force is made up of men of great stamina, and outstanding physique. The first "hurdle" for those of the criminal class to get over is at the entrance gates to the Barracks. Assembled in the crowd—which usually hangs about there—are several detectives, who make it their business to communicate with the enrolling officer if occasion requires. This class of applicant therefore gets an unexpected shock when told that the Empire does not need his services.

ALLOCATION OF DUTY.

In dealing with men of the right stamp every effort is made to place them suitably. There is still a preponderance in favour of the Light Horse division. The Army Service Corps and the Army Medical Corps are also in demand. The authorities are not, however, prepared to be dictated to as to what section the men shall serve in. They intend that only men who are thoroughly trained shall be allotted to duty in these respective ranks. Those who would come forward intending to nominate their positions in the force are asked to avoid the expense of visiting the Barracks.

LUNCHEON ON THE ORVIETO.

Colonel Wallack, State Commandant, Lieutenant-Colonel MacLaurin, officer commanding the 1st Infantry Brigade, and Lieutenant-Colonel Antill were included in the list of guests entertained at luncheon yesterday by Mr. David Reid, on the R.M.S. Orvieto. In proposing the health of the Allied Forces, Mr. Reid emphasised the splendid part the Belgians had played in the war. Responses were made by the Consuls of Belgium and France, M. Watteeuw and M. Chayet, respectively. Subsequently the ship's band played the National Anthems of all the Allied armies.

The Governor-General notifies that pardons will be granted to all soldiers who were in a state of desertion from the permanent forces on August 5, and who surrender themselves in our Commonwealth of Australia on or before September 20.

On Thursday afternoon Sergeant Easterbrook, of the 7th A.L.H., who is going with the expeditionary force, was presented with a fine horse by Mr. J. B. Shorter, of Parramatta.

On Friday evening the Parramatta Squadron of A.L.H. presented their comrade, Lieutenant Wallace Cox, with a charger. Lieutenant Cox is a brother of Colonel Cox, C.B., who distinguished himself in the Boer war.

HALL WRECKED.

SOCIALISTS PROVOKE A RIOT

BROKEN HILL, Friday.

Another 45 infantry volunteers left by express for the Morphettville Camp. There was a big crowd to see the troops off, including a gang of socialists, who boo-hooed the troops, sang red-rag songs, and called the troops names. The crowd responded with a patriotic outburst, and much cheering.

After the train had left, the crowd marched down Sulphide-street, singing patriotic airs. The socialists again interrupted, and a crowd of several hundred attacked the Socialist Hall, a small stone building. They smashed in the windows and doors, and, entering, wrecked the interior of the hall, with all its furniture. A hand-to-hand fight occurred, each side using remnants of the wrecked furniture. The socialists were finally routed. A couple of police were present, but were unable to do anything to stem the melee. Since several of the Broken Hill police have gone to the war, the station is undermanned.

POLL TAX PROPOSED TO AVERT CRISIS.

PERTH, Friday.

A meeting of citizens representative of the mining, timber, pastoral, farming, and allied industries, was held yesterday to consider a scheme to keep the respective industries in full operation, and to evolve a remedy for any crisis that may arise. The Mayor presided, and the speakers who addressed the gathering said the scheme for keeping the primary and allied industries going, and to avoid the necessity for people having to seek the benefits of the distress fund, was to levy a poll-tax of £2 per head on bachelors, and £1 per head on married men, and 10s per head on single girls. This would yield £120,100 per annum, and in 10 years' time they would be able to return a million, which would be the sum required. The Agricultural Bank had forfeited lands on which people had tried and failed to make a living, and some people had more land than they could work. If these lands were worked, they would produce 15 million or 20 million bushels of wheat. At present settlers were leaving their holdings, because storekeepers could not afford to give them any more credit. The consequence was they could not feed their families, and were flocking to the city. The scheme to be evolved was how to put these men back on their land.

A committee was appointed to formulate a scheme and report to a subsequent meeting.

The Minister for Works (Mr. Johnson) states that the Government will work at the State saw mills two short shifts if the men will agree to work six hours in order to provide more employment.

RED CROSS.

MORE KIT BAGS WANTED.

The Tourist Bureau window in Challis House has been lent to the Red Cross Society from September 17 to October 8, for a display of Red Cross work and requisites.

The committee wish to thank those who so kindly lent their motor cars to assist on the work. But for this generosity the society would have been unable to cope with the heavy rush of work last month. At present a car is at their disposal on Mondays and Fridays, but offers of like assistance for the remaining days of the week would be welcomed.

The produce department has taken for its motto, "Every little helps. Will you help?" And judging by the response, even before the depot is well under way, it seems that its success is assured. Messrs. David Jones and Lovell and Co. have sent office furniture, the Seamen's Mission a large flag, Mr. Holdship flag and envelopes, Winn and Co., North Sydney, a large amount of printing free, Mrs. John M'Phillamy case of 12 dozen eggs, Cambridge Poultry Farm 18 dozen eggs, Mr. Ray Kelso a bag of potatoes, Mrs. Riley flowers and numerous other small donations. Mr. Hooper 10s, and Mrs. Palo 10s. The Boy Scouts are invaluable in their department.

In response to the appeal for empty kit-bags 3100 were yesterday despatched to the Victoria Barracks. Large numbers are still coming in, and it is hoped by the hon. secretary, Miss Marjorie M. Mort, in a day or two to reach the desired total of 6759.

Five hundred army blankets have been despatched to the front. The factories cannot supply any more of these at present. Money is wanted for the purchase immediately of white blankets. It is proposed to open a big department in the basement of the Town Hall, Sydney. Ladies who have a few hours to spare will be welcomed there to share in the ever-increasing work.

A generous response has been made to the appeal to knitters. Large parcels of socks have been sent for distribution to Victoria Barracks. A warm letter of thanks has been received from Major Christian, R.A.F.A., C.O. 1st F.A. Brigade Australian Imperial Expeditionary Force.

The branch of the Red Cross Society, inaugurated by the women of Beecroft and district (including Thornleigh, Pennant Hills, Carlingford, and Cheltenham), has its head quarters at the Beecroft School of Arts, and has done splendid work. Up to date the following articles have been made and sent in:—142 flannel shirts, 109 pairs knitted socks, 45 flannel nightingales, 38 suits pyjamas, 162 cholera belts, 35 handkerchiefs, 19 knitted Balaclavas, 35 bags, 12 hospital shirts, 2 kit-bags, mufflers, eye bandages, washers, towels, many rolled and sterilised surgical bandages, with safety pins, and one hot water bag. £10 has been sent to the Red Cross fund, per Miss Mort, as a first instalment.

A drawing-room meeting was held on Wednesday last at Lilianfels, Katoomba, the residence of Mrs. A. Kemp, when a branch of the Red Cross was formed. A collection in the room amounted to £11 11s 6d.

A branch of the Red Cross Society has been formed at Berry. Seventy pounds was collected at a recent Public school meeting.

Miss Sara Collins is organising a matinee at the Palace Theatre on Thursday, September 17, at which between 200 and 300 professional children will appear. Two of them, Rosie Flood and Baby Gourlay, will parade the streets this morning and afternoon in a motor car, Baby Gourlay playing an organette, while Rosie sings "Please give me a penny."

A gentlemen's committee at Gordon has raised £250. The ladies' committee has made up a number of bags. Crude oil for use on the men's boots to keep them soft when on the march has already been sent to the infantry.

The children of Bondi school have contributed over £23 to the Waverley-Bondi branch of the society, besides a large quantity of hospital comforts. The management of Olympic Pictures granted No. 2 Theatre, Bondi. Over £30 was realised.

The Hornsby Red Cross branch has forwarded 20 soldiers' bags, and have in hand material for another 30. They have also collected £150.

MASTER BUILDERS' FUND.

With a view to extending the scope and increasing the amount of the fund, it has been decided at a joint meeting of representatives of the master builders and brickmasters, to alter the name of the fund to "The Master Builders, Brickmasters, and Allied Trades' Fund." MISS SHAW'S CONCERT.

The successful concert promoted by Miss Evelyn Morgan Shaw in aid of the Lord Mayor's Fund resulted in £187 being added to the fund.

The Petersham Congregational Glee Club will give a concert in the Petersham Town Hall, under the conductorship of Mr. Miller, on Tuesday.

Fred Easton was yesterday, through his father, Mr. Walter Easton, manager of Rowan's, Ltd., presented by the employees and friends, with a smoker's outfit as a recognition of his volunteering for the front.

The local branch of the Patriotic Fund has received large donations from stock-holders. Mr. Andy Crain, of Mt. Adrah, has given a truck of bullocks for food for the soldiers. Large numbers of sheep have been given to the fund. Besides numerous donations from small holders, which will probably amount to a truck-load, Mr. J. B. Sharp gave 50 sheep, Mr. R. H. Sharp 25 sheep, Mr. D. T. Davies 25, and Mr. Hassett offered 1 per cent. of his flock. Other gifts of stock are coming in daily.

CITY FIRE.

CARRIAGE BAZAAR ALIGHT.

HORSES BURNED.

Sixty vehicles and three horses were burned in a fire which destroyed the premises occupied by Joseph Christey as a carriage bazaar at 557-559 Harris-street, Ultimo, and severely damaged the building adjoining, early yesterday.

While the fire brigade was at work, William Holdsworth, a groom employed at Christey's, with the help of several men, saved 14 valuable horses. The fierceness of the fire made their work difficult, and three horses, which they were unable to reach, perished in the flames.

Besides the horses, 60 vehicles in the bazaar were destroyed, and three vans and a furniture waggon, belonging to Mrs. Riley, 50 Victoria-street, Darlinghurst, reduced to ashes.

There is no indication as to how the fire originated.

It is estimated that the total damage will exceed £5000. The vehicles were covered by insurance to the amount of £700 with the Atlas Insurance Company.

DEATH OF MR. E. J. WILLIAMS.

The death occurred yesterday evening of Mr. Edward James Williams, chief engineer of Messrs. John Fairfax and Sons, proprietors of the "Sydney Morning Herald." Mr. Williams was at work during yesterday morning, and was conversing with some of his fellow employees. He complained of feeling unwell, and later went to his home. No serious result was anticipated, and the news of his sudden death came as a very painful shock to his colleagues.

Mr. Williams served his time as a fitter with the firm of Messrs. Hoe and Co., the great printing machine manufacturers of England. He came from there direct to the employ of Messrs. John Fairfax and Sons about 32 years ago, taking charge of the engineering department. Later he took over the engineering and printing, and was subsequently appointed chief engineer. In his own particular line he was one of the most highly qualified men this side of the Equator. He erected the large printing machines with which the "Herald" is printed, and his engineering ability enabled him to carry out extensive alterations of the printing machines to cope with the increased work of the office. He was a man of great personal integrity, and possessed remarkable organising ability in his own department.

Mr. Williams was about 52 years of age, and he leaves a wife and family. The funeral will leave his late residence, Flood-street, Bondi, at 2.45 o'clock this afternoon, for the Waverley cemetery.

PARTIAL ECLIPSE OF THE MOON.

Last night's partial eclipse of the moon attracted much attention in the city on account of the particularly clear and unobstructed view offered.

The night was an ideal one for the observation of the phenomenon, and those who were sufficiently interested to watch the moon's surface through the various phases of the partial eclipse were well rewarded. The penumbra was clearly visible to the naked eye long before 10 p.m., and by 10.20 p.m. the clear cut shadow of the earth could plainly be seen traversing the moon's surface from the eastern edge.

The maximum was reached shortly before midnight, when the greater part of the moon's surface was almost entirely obscured.

COAL IN WAR.

"CONDITIONAL CONTRABAND."

IMPORTANCE TO AUSTRALIA.

As a coal exporting country, Australia, and more particularly this State, is deeply interested in the treatment of this description of fuel in time of war. A vessel clears from Newcastle deep-laden with coal destined perhaps for Valparaiso, an old customer of ours. What may happen to her? If the vessel be a British or an ally ship she may be seized, her coals removed, and her hull sent to the bottom by a German cruiser should she be unfortunate enough to encounter one on the high seas. Or if she happened to be a neutral vessel—one, for instance, registered in the United States—she might be subjected to "visit and search," and the duty would devolve upon the master of proving that his cargo was really intended for a friendly neutral state, and not for, say, H.M.A.S. Australia, lying somewhere in the neighbourhood of Samoa. If it so happened that the cargo was really intended for one of the Australian cruiser squadron, then, even though carried in a neutral bottom, it would be liable to confiscation by the enemy. As far as the Commonwealth is concerned, two things are important—one is not to allow the Empire's foes to get supplies of coal at sea, either by prearrangement and purchase or by capture. The other is that our export trade in this valuable commodity should not be interfered with unnecessarily.

It was during the Crimean war that coal first began to be regarded as possible contraband. Before that time there was no object in so classing it, for only then did coal begin to be used for naval purposes, as steam vessels took the place of sailing ships. Great Britain announced that coal was one of those articles whose use was equivocal; that what might be used for quite innocent purposes—as, for instance, to feed the furnaces of factories, might also be used to stoke the furnaces of the fleet. In the second case it was contraband. In the war between France and Piedmont on the one side, and Austria on the other, Great Britain as a neutral held the same view as she had previously held while a belligerent. The French and Piedmontese Governments, however, decided not to regard coal as contraband of war in any case, and during the struggle that followed they honourably carried out their self-imposed obligation. In the American Civil War the British view was adopted by the Federal side. In the war of 1871 the Prussian Government prohibited the export of coal to French ports. France, on the other hand, declared that coal could in no way be regarded as contraband of war. Russia, too, adopted the French view and at the West African conference her Envoy declared that coal must not be regarded as contraband. Most of these decisions were based upon the needs or peculiar position of the particular Power concerned.

Japan had adopted the British view that coal was "conditional" contraband only—that is, that it was to be regarded as contraband only when destined for the enemy forces or for the enemy State, and not when manifestly destined for the use of the civil population of one of the belligerents. Russia adopted quite the opposite view, making a complete volte face from her former attitude. On February 28, 1904, just 20 days after war was declared, her "rules which the Imperial Government will enforce during the war with Japan" were issued. The eighth rule included in her list of absolute contraband:—"Every kind of fuel, such as coal, naphtha, alcohol, and other similar materials." So a cargo of Newcastle coal intended for the population of Tokio would equally be liable to seizure and confiscation as a cargo of Westport coal intended for the naval authorities at Nagasaki.

On August 10, 1904, the British Government addressed a vigorous protest to the Russian Government pointing out that the Russian treatment of coal as contraband was diametrically opposed to the declaration which had been made by the Russian plenipotentiary in 1884, on the occasion of the Berlin Conference. It was, it stated, impossible for the British Government to admit that coal and fuel of every kind were contraband, irrespective of whether they were destined for the belligerent forces or not, or to admit that it was open to any Power to ignore the long-established distinction between "absolute" and "conditional" contraband, and to include in the former category a number of articles in themselves innocent and largely dealt in by neutral Powers, or finally to admit that the seizure of ships and cargoes by reason merely of their comprising those articles, and without proof of a military destination, was justifiable in international law. Hence, all claims for compensation put forward by British subjects would receive the strenuous support of the British Government. The latter had no desire to place obstacles in the way of a belligerent desirous of taking reasonable precautions to prevent his enemy from receiving supplies, but it could not admit that this carried a right to intercept at any distance from the scene of operations, and without proof of any military destination any articles which a belligerent might determine to regard as contraband. United States vessels were also seized, and Mr. Hay, the United States Secretary of State, also protested. He wrote: "The true criteria for determining what constitutes contraband are, warlike nature, use, and destination, and these criteria have been arrived at by the common consent of civilised nations, after centuries of struggle, and the logical results of the Russian doctrine would be to destroy completely all neutral commerce with the non-combatant population of Japan, to obviate the necessity of blockades, and to obliterate all distinction between commerce in contraband and non-contraband goods." Eventually, as the result of these remonstrances and an adverse decision of its own Supreme Prize Court, the Russian Government referred the matter to Professor Martens. At his suggestion the list of absolute contraband was materially modified, but coal was continued on the list, and the only satisfaction that could be obtained from the Czar's Government was that its rules would be construed liberally.

During the Russo-Japanese war the British ship Allanton, which had carried a cargo of Welsh coal to Japan and landed it safely without encountering Russian cruisers, while on its return voyage taking a cargo of Japanese coal from Muroran to Singapore was captured, taken in and condemned by the Prize Court at Vladivostock. The grounds of condemnation were that she had carried a cargo of contraband during her outward voyage, and that her actual destination during her inward voyage was really hostile. The first ground afforded no jurisdiction for condemnation, for deposit of the contraband frees the vessel of all liability. As to the second ground, it was not borne out by the evidence. Later on the decree of condemnation was reversed by the Admiralty Council at St. Petersburg, but the Court held that the seizure in the circumstances was quite justifiable. British sailors, too, had some trouble with the Japanese naval authorities. The British ship Aphrodite, carrying a cargo of Cardiff coal, used almost exclusively for naval purposes, while on her way to Vladivostock, was captured and afterwards condemned, the vessel being involved in the same fate as the cargo on the ground that she concealed her real destination.

The Allies having now accepted the Declaration of London, with some modifications, fuel of all kinds is now regarded as "conditional" contraband, and as such is liable to capture if it is destined for the use of the armed forces, or of a Government Department of the enemy State, and this is so even if the port of destination be a neutral one. Having once deposited its contraband, the vessel is free from further restraint, unless it succeeded by the use of false papers, in which event it is liable to capture and condemnation, even on its return voyage. This is the law on the subject as laid down by the Declaration of London, as modified by the Order in Council of August 20 last, published in the "Commonwealth Gazette" of August 25.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The manager of the Broken Hill Water Supply, Limited, reports by telegram that the consumption of water for the month of August was 19,847,600 gallons, against 24,693,700 gallons in July.

Gold receipts at the Sydney branch of the Royal Mint totalled 21,058 fine ounces, making 241,705 fine ounces since January 1.

WAR PROBLEMS.

Mr. Gordon Wesche, the superintendent of the P. and O. Company, reports that a cable has been received by the Oversea Shipping Representatives' Association from the ship owners in England stating that a reduction had taken place in the war surtax on freights, from 25 per cent. to 20 per cent., on account of a reduction in the war risks on hulls.

The question of reopening the Stock Exchange of Melbourne was again considered by members yesterday. It was decided to adjourn until Thursday, when the matter was to be further discussed.

Short loans are quoted unchanged at 3 per cent. The discount rate for best three-month bills is 1 per cent. lower at 4½ per cent.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

Our cables mention that the Copra Association has fixed the price of South Sea bags on spot in London at £23/10/ per ton. Private cables have been despatched asking for further information, more especially as to terms. Stocks on spot are only moderate, as the island firms have stopped bringing the copra from the islands, and on their part the natives have stopped gathering because of lower prices offered. First brands of linseed oil can still be obtained at 4/ and 4/2 for raw and boiled respectively. Australian linseed oil is quoted at 3/9 per gallon in cases, and there have been good sales all over Australia at this quotation. Champion's whitelead is selling in some quarters at £48, though in other quarters £49 is asked. There is also a variation of a full penny a gallon in the price of turpentine, Pinetree being quoted at 3/6 in some quarters and 3/7 in others, and Pratt's at 3/7 and 3/8. The trade in paint materials, it is recognised, is not nearly as brisk as it was two months ago. Financial considerations have their weight, but another cause of the falling-off is the high price, and by those houses which are quoting the lower rates it is felt that could still lower rates be asked it might in the end be more profitable, as trade would thereby be stimulated. Fish oils and the less frequently used seed oils were firm at late rates.

Metal lines are quiet. Parcels of No. 8 galvanised wire were available at £9.5/. For distributing lots £9/10/ was asked. Imported wire netting was fairly strong. A cable received from London during the day stated that manufacturers in London had raised prices of metal goods all round. A fact, too, which is sometimes lost sight of is the heavy increase in cost which will accrue through higher freights and the war risk insurance. Addition to landed costs will range from 5/ per ton to 21/ per ton.

Carbide of calcium was irregular, small lots selling at from £23 to £25. Two boats are near at hand, and their arrival should relieve the situation. Chloride of calcium, which is used greatly in refrigerating, had doubled in price since the war broke out, being quoted at £10 per ton, whereas the normal price was £5. Parcels of bi-carbonate of soda in hundredweights were available at £10 per ton, and in 3cwt packages at £9/10/.

A heavy demand existed for rope, both locally made and imported. Canvas was also well inquired for, but stocks were somewhat concentrated owing to some holders having sold out to consumers. The demand for the troops was being well met. Prices continue on the average about one-third higher than before the outbreak of war, but there is some irregularity.

At the tea auction yesterday competition was spirited, and every line offered was speedily disposed of. Only one lot was sold at /8 per lb, and the others realised from /8¼ to /8¾. In no case was less than the full covering rate obtained. Five hundred packages of Javas were offered and sold. A cable was received from Colombo, confirming the news of the reopening of the auction sales there on Tuesday. No word was received from Calcutta.

Woolpacks were again greatly sought after yesterday, and steady sales were made all through the day, the latest price being 5/ delivered discount, which was almost /1½ above the net price, 4/9, of the previous day. The market, however, is almost cleared up, and holders have only lots to fulfil contracts. In one instance at least, a holder has sold none at high prices, but has kept all for supplying contracts made some months ago at 2/9 to 3/. Cornsacks were nominal, and, in view of the uncertainties of the position, most merchants were refusing to quote. 8/ net was the nominal quotation. Branbags were easier at 5/7 net to rails.

GERMAN GOODS.

"Merchant" writes:—It has come to the writer's knowledge that several retail firms doing a large business in this city are refusing to purchase German goods from Sydney wholesale houses. These good people are no doubt labouring under the impression that by so doing they are proving themselves to be patriots, and I hope, therefore, that you will publish this letter with the object of disabusing their minds of such an idea. The immediate incidence of their action is simply to penalise their fellow Australian citizens who have paid good Australian gold for these same German goods. Refusal to purchase goods because they are German, therefore, is quite a mistake, for having been purchased and paid for it would be the Australian importers and retailers who would be injured and not the German manufacturer. Naturally my remarks only apply to goods already here and paid for by British subjects.

THE WANT OF CORNSACKS.

The Sydney Chamber of Commerce has received, through the under-secretary and director of the Department of Agriculture, a copy of a telegram which was received on August 24 from the Prime Minister, as follows: "With regard to your telegram re jute, the Minister for Trade and Customs has been in consultation with leading importers and with the agents of British India boats. On the question of transport the agents state there will probably be no difficulty in providing sufficient tonnage, but they are awaiting information from the naval authorities as to whether any of their boats other than the Hymettus, already taken, will be required for transport purposes, in view of this possibility are preliminarily negotiating for other tonnage. With regard to finance, Mr. Groom has learned from banking authorities that bills upon India are now being freely negotiated, but at a slightly increased rate. As to supply of cornsacks, representatives of trade say there will be no difficulty in obtaining adequate quantities, but the higher rates of insurance now ruling, and possibly advanced freights in the near future, will cause corresponding percentage of increase in price in Australia. The insurance companies' war risk, which was 10 per cent. at date of your first telegram on the subject, is now 5 per cent. On the question of insurance generally, the Commonwealth Government is in communication with Imperial authorities." The Under-Secretary states that further communications are now passing between this State Government and the Commonwealth Government in regard to the provision of tonnage between Singapore and Australia. The State Premier has cabled to Mr. J. B. Suttor, Commercial Commissioner in the East for New South Wales, requesting him to make enquiry as to the whereabouts of the Gracchus, which was reported to be at Batavia.

B. I. STEAMERS' MOVEMENTS.

The following are the movements of the B.I.S.N. Company's steamers in the Australian trade:—Steamer Janus now at Albury; steamer Gracchus, Calcutta to Australia, left Batavia in continuation of voyage on September 3; steamer Ismalia, Calcutta to Australia, left Rangoon in continuation of voyage on September 3; steamer Chanda, to leave Calcutta for Australia, September 12; steamer Obra, to leave Calcutta for Australia, September 27.

BREADSTUFFS.

HIGH PRICES MAINTAINED.

Of spot wheat, yesterday a sale was made at 4/9, and for wheat for October delivery 4/10 was offered. Beyond the one sale in each position there were no further sellers, and buyers searched in vain for grain. New wheat is practically unobtainable, although buyers indicate 4/4 for January to March delivery. As regards this season's contracts the speculators are feeling the position very keenly. When they sold forward at 3/9 and cannot now obtain the wheat at 4/9 it may be imagined what their losses must be, at least 3/ on every bag of wheat, or £150 on each thousand bags. In Melbourne the position is still more acute by reason of the wheat being concentrated in so few hands. The oversea markets are extremely firm. Chicago, our cables inform us, quotes 5/2½ for wheat of May, 1915, delivery.

Flour was steady at ten guineas. For export £10 f.o.b. was paid. Bran and pollard were in demand at £5/10/ and £5/15/ respectively.

At Darling Harbour yesterday 218 tons of wheat and 246 tons of flour were manifested to arrive.

NEW POPE.

CARDINAL DELLA CHIESA

BENEDICT XV.

ROME, Sept. 3, 7.50 a.m.

Cardinal Della Chiesa has been elected Pope. He will assume the name of Benedict the Fifteenth.

The new Pope, who is 59 years of age, is a member of an ancient noble family. He was recently appointed Archbishop of Bologna, and was formerly associated with the late Cardinal Rampolla's secretaryship.

He is expected to revive the late Pope Leo's policy of strengthening the political foundations of the Church.

The result of the election came as a surprise, but it is being warmly acclaimed.

FROM PRIVATE SECRETARY TO PONTIFF.

On the third day of the Conclave in Rome the Cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church elected Cardinal Della Chiesa as the successor to the late Pope Pius X. It is stated that Cardinal Pietro Maffi, Archbishop of Pisa, a very popular candidate, was leading up to the final ballot. In accordance with the custom of Papal elections, the newly-elected Pope selected his title immediately he was asked if he would accept the Fisherman's Ring, with all the heavy responsibilities which are attached to it in the twentieth century. Elected as the representative of the Prince of Peace, yet within touching distance, so to speak, of the great war of nations, the Archbishop of Bologna must have summoned all his courage and confidence when he answered, "I take the name of Benedict the Fifteenth!"

SWIFT RISE TO EMINENCE

Born at Pelgi, in the diocese of Genoa, on November 21, 1854, Giacomo (James) Della Chiesa, was ordained to the priesthood in 1878. In 1883 Monsignor Della Chiesa accompanied the late Cardinal Rampolla to Madrid, and remained there as secretary to the Papal Nunciature until 1887. He then returned to Rome with the Cardinal, who became Secretary of State to Pope Leo XIII. Under Cardinal Rampolla he was initiated into the "inner workings" of the Vatican, as one of the "minutanti" or clerical staff. The year 1901 saw his promotion from the rank of a minor official to the position of Deputy Secretary of the Cypher. In December, 1907, Pope Pius X. appointed the ecclesiastic who was to succeed him Archbishop of Bologna. In that important Italian See the present occupant of the Papal Chair was "learning the art of administration," when Pope Pius X. selected him for a place in the Sacred College. For six years before he received the red hat the Archbishop of Bologna had been talked about as a probable Cardinal. Those who know say that he was in high favour with Pope Pius X., and it is said that the late Pope regarded him as a man with all the essential qualifications for the highest office in the Roman Catholic Church. Named as Cardinal in May last, Monsignor Della Chiesa was formally called to the Sacred College in June. The new Pope will not be 60 until November next. His election must have been a great surprise to all save the few who claim to have recognised "the cultured, cautious, and courteous Archbishop of Bologna," as one high ecclesiastic described him yesterday, as "the coming Pope."

BELLS AND SINGING.

The bells of the Sacred Heart Church, Darlinghurst, were set ringing yesterday morning, and at noon the school children sang "God Bless the Pope." Monsignor O'Haran, who ordered the ringing of the bells, met the new Pope in Rome a good many years ago. Monsignor Della Chiesa was then one of the Vatican officials under Cardinal Rampolla. A small man, with great strength of character, the ecclesiastic from Genoa struck the visitor to Rome as an official who combined sagacious discretion with inexhaustible vigour. Diplomacy he seemed to have learnt from Cardinal Rampolla. Monsignor O'Haran thinks that the new Pope, in selecting his name, had in his mind Pope Benedict XIV., who was distinguished in his government of the Church, and who was born at Bologna—the Archiepiscopal See of the successor to Pope Pius X. The late Cardinal Moran's private secretary added that Pope Benedict XV., as a "Northerner," might to some extent soften the strain of the Papal relations with the Royal House of Italy, while a policy of conciliation in regard to France might be again adopted as in the Pontificate of Pope Leo XIII.

THE WAR AND ITS LESSON.

Every hour's fighting for supremacy between the Allied Forces and the German Army brings us nearer to a new era that will ultimately dominate the future policy of the Anglo-Saxon race; in fact, of the entire world.

There is but one great lesson to be derived from this gigantic conflict, and it is that the nation most effectively equipped and defended in perfect arms and scientific knowledge of the art of war will be successful.

There are other wars than those carried on between nations fighting for some great goal. There are battles fought daily in other spheres. The health of the general army is an essential thing, and so is the health of each individual member of the fighting line.

Thousands of the bravest and best of our soldier manhood are now leaving our shores to serve their country, and their kits would be more fully equipped if they contained the ever-reliable nerve and blood remedy, Clements Tonic. In these nerve-tensioned times this medicine asserts its value. It is unequalled for creating iron nerve, keen appetite, and sound sleep after exhausting labours. It is THE medicine for every Australian home.—Advt.

NOTES.

An extraordinary general meeting of the Turon River Gold Dredging Company was held yesterday at Hunter House, Sydney. The resolution to voluntarily wind up the company, and that Mr. Vincent Alexander Brownhill be appointed liquidator, was carried unanimously.

KALGOORLIE, Friday.

The Sons of Gwalia Mining Company has declared a dividend of 6d per share, less income tax, payable on September 30. The transfer books close September 10.

MOUNT LYELL MINES.

QUEENSTOWN, Friday.

So far, with the exception that operations at the Comstock Mine, where 10 men were employed, have been discontinued, work at the Mount Lyell Company's mines and the smelters is proceeding as usual. It is probable, however, that development work at the mines will shortly be curtailed, and operations restricted almost entirely to ore production.

AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.

The high pressure, which has been dominating the weather over the continent for the past few days, has moved about 500 miles eastward, and is at present centrally situated between Sydney and Lord Howe Island. The monsoonal dips are still in evidence over Queensland, while a new Antarctic disturbance has made its appearance over the western portion of the Great Australian Bight, and so far has resulted in unsettled and showery weather over the south-western quarter of Western Australia.

It may be said that the conditions at present are more promising for rain within the next two days than they have been for some time past.

Ocean Forecast.—Squally south-east winds on the Queensland coast; squally southerly winds in the western bight; fogs on the New South Wales coast.

SPORTING.

THE TURF.

Horseracing at Moorefield and trotting at Epping provide ample sport for metropolitan turf patrons this afternoon; while those who prefer to go further afield will be catered for at Broadmeadow, where the Newcastle Jockey Club holds its September meeting. Victorian racegoers will be catered for by the Victoria Amateur Turf Club at Caulfield; the annual meeting of the Boulder Racing Club, in connection with the goldfields circuit, will be brought to a close; and at Brisbane the Albion Park Jockey Club will provide an outing for sporting folk.

Monday will be a busy day at the office of the Australian Jockey Club, for, up to 4 p.m., the general entries will be received for the spring meeting, to be held next month, and at the same hour first forfeits for the A.J.C. Derby, Epsom Handicap, The Metropolitan, Breeders' Plate, and Gimcrack Stakes fall due. For the 19 events comprised in the list for the general entry, the added money amounts to 17,350 sovs, of which 2000 sovs subsidises the jumping events, 9000 sovs the w.f.a. and races at set weights; and 6350 the minor handicaps on the flat. The business in this connection will be greatly facilitated by early attention, and thus avoid the risk of missing the valuable prizes on the programme.

In view of the near approach of the spring meeting at headquarters, the September reunion of the Moorefield Racing Club this afternoon is invested with a deal of interest, as several horses with engagements in the big handicaps at Randwick will be out under silk. The track is reported to be excellent going, and the management has made ample provision for a large gathering. The transit arrangements, in addition to the ordinary traffic by rail to Kogarah, include special trains, starting from the Central Railway Station at 11.15 a.m. (horses and attendants), 12.25, 12.34, 12.48, 12.55, 1.6, and 1.18 p.m. The sport commences at 2.10 p.m. with the Hurdle Race, in which the places may be occupied by King Lucre, Gorlias, and Flute Player; Lindera, Willow Green, and Embracer may pass the post in that order for the Flying Handicap; while Barraconda, Bannaby, and Quisita may claim the attention of the judge in the Kogarah Stakes. The situations in the Three-years-old Handicap may go to Wynworth, Marissa, and Viburnum; Graftoline, Magas, and Sir Vive may divide the honours in the Moorefield Handicap; and Ethel Buckley, Truxton King, and Cacique may get home as named in the Welter Handicap.

An interesting bill of fare has been drafted for the meeting of the New South Wales Trotting Club at Epping this afternoon, and with 107 entrants, among whom are included a number of high-class performers, excellent sport may be anticipated. The track is first-class going, and the management has left nothing undone to bring about a successful reunion. The customary transit arrangements will be in vogue, special and ordinary trams landing visitors at the racecourse gates; while a special train, conveying passengers and horses, will leave Richmond at 5.55 a.m. in the morning, returning at 8 p.m. The first race is timed to start at 1.30 p.m.

The September meeting of the Newcastle Jockey Club takes place this afternoon, and, judging by the equine talent engaged, the sport promises to be of a high-class character. Metropolitan sportsmen intending to make the trip will be in ample time at the trysting place by the trains which leave the Central Railway Station for the north at 6.40, 8.15, 8.35, and 9.15 a.m.; while the return journey can be made by the trains leaving the coal city at 5.15 and 6.50 p.m. The track at Broadmeadow is reported to be in good trim, and a special tram service runs between the local railway station and the racecourse.

AMUSEMENTS.

THEATRE ROYAL.

David Belasco's drama, showing the life of "Mme. Du Barry," is drawing good audiences at the Theatre Royal, where some diverting surprises illustrate in spectacular fashion the gaiety of the French Court under Louis XV. Miss Nellie Stewart plays with charm and dramatic power a great part as Du Barry, and Mr. Lewis Willoughby as the lover, and Mr. Blakiston as the King, are also prominent. There will be a matinee at 1.45 on Wednesday.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

At Her Majesty's Theatre, that gayest of musical farces, "The Girl in the Taxi," continues to prove attractive, owing as much to the elaborately comical situations of the plot as to the sparkling character of the music, in which two or three valse airs have become generally popular. Messrs. Workman, Rawlins, Fisher, Maguire, Plunket, Wren, and Miss Maggie Jarvis play the chief characters with vivacity. There will be a matinee on Wednesday.

CRITERION THEATRE.

"The Chorus Lady" has introduced Miss Muriel Starr in a striking character as Patricia O'Brien, at the Criterion Theatre, where the straightforward, impulsive nature of that chivalrous, but slangy, defender of her scapegrace sister is vividly depicted by the actress. There are various lively, and some emotional, scenes in the new American play, which embraces a peep into the artists' dressing-room. There will be a matinee on Wednesday.

MR. WU AT THE PALACE THEATRE.

This evening the Beaumont Smith-Louis Meyer Company will repeat the much-discussed "Mr. Wu" at the Palace Theatre. The Anglo-Eastern drama is still running in London, and Mr. Meyer has cabled that despite the war, there has been no falling off in attendances at this grimly fascinating production, which has now reached its 250th performance. Mr. W. F. Grant is again appearing as Wu Li Chang, and the big scene with Miss Congdon is warmly applauded.

"THE SOLDIER'S WEDDING."

This evening, at the Adelphi Theatre, George Willoughby's dramatic company will enter on the last six nights of their season, when will be staged for the first time in Sydney Walter Melville's successful London drama, "The Soldier's Wedding." Mr. George Cross will play the part of Jack Brown (a British soldier), while Miss Vera Remee will interpret the part of Nancy Lee, his sweetheart. There are four acts and 13 picturesquely-staged scenes in the play, and the military element is predominant and appropriate to the times. The plan is at Nicholson's.

THE ROSARY.

Next Saturday, at the Adelphi Theatre, George Willoughby, Ltd., in conjunction with Mr. E. J. Carroll, will produce "The Rosary," a play that has excited a good deal of attention both in England and America. It will be staged here by the original company which made it a success in America, and will include Mr. Harrington Reynolds, Mr. Paul Byron, Mr. Walter Fenner and Mr. Albert M'Govern, Misses Jessie Arnold, Ethel Elder, and Grace Reading. The plan for the opening performance will be on view at Nicholson's on Monday morning next at 9 o'clock.

SYDNEY SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

The present season of the Symphony Orchestra will be brought to a conclusion with the presentation of a brilliant programme next Saturday afternoon. Herr Edward Goll, the cultured pianist who won applause at the first concert of this year, will be associated with the orchestra in Liszt's "Pianoforte Concerto No. 2, in A Major." Tchaikovsky's richly orchestrated Fifth Symphony in E is to be the central orchestral item in a list which will include Borodin's sketch, "In the Steppes of Central Asia," Sinagaglia's "Le Baruffe, Chiozotti," and Dvorak's "Carneval" overture. Plan will open at Paling's as notified.

ROYAL PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

The Royal Philharmonic Society's next concert is fixed for Tuesday, Sept. 15, at the Town Hall, when Mr. Joseph Bradley will conduct the orchestra (led by M. Henri Staell), and chorus of 400 performers in Villiers Stanford's setting of Tennyson's "The Revenge." The miscellaneous programme will include other patriotic numbers, notably the new Australian national song composed by Theodore Tourrier, Mlle. Antonia Dolores is returning from her tour on purpose to carry out her generous promise to sing, and Mr. Philip Newbury has been engaged. New subscribers may now join at Paling's.

MLLE. ANTONIA DOLORES.

Mlle. Antonia Dolores, who is now in the middle of a long and successful interstate tour, has already visited all her Queensland centres, and yesterday had reached Quirindi. From that town the French star-soprano telegraphs her intention of singing for the Belgian and Red Cross Funds, in addition to making her complimentary appearance with the Royal Philharmonic Society, before passing on to Melbourne. It is understood that the diva will give a concert for this purpose at the Town Hall on Wednesday, September 16, assisted by leading artists. Mr. Brownlow will be hon. manager, and the reserved seats will be 5s. The plan will open at Paling's next Wednesday.

THE MELBA PATRIOTIC CONCERT.

Mme. Melba has generously decided to devote her reappearance in Sydney to the Red Cross Fund, and will star at a concert which she is promoting in association with the Royal Philharmonic Society. This event will take place at the Town Hall on Saturday, September 26. There will be an orchestra and chorus of 400 performers, and with the diva's aid a magnificent programme will be presented. Seats may be reserved at Paling's before the regular plan opens at a guinea and half a guinea, applications being made by letter. Messrs. John Lemmone and William Johnson are hon. secretaries, and J. E. Brownlow hon. manager.

The comic opera "A Quaker Courtship" will be produced at the Repertory Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday evenings by the Sydney Musical Quakers, when the piece will be attractively staged, with full chorus, orchestra, and principals. The plan is at Nicholson's.

At the King's Hall, on Thursday afternoon next, at 5 o'clock, the second concert of the Thursday 5 O'Clocks will be given. Mrs. Alexander Gordon will be the vocalist of the concert, and Mr. Laurence Godfrey Smith the pianist. The plan is at Paling's.

Kerry) will assist. Misses Annie Mills, Dorothy Hellmrich, Lillian Moore, Queenie Fenton, the Garcia School of Music, and Messrs. Cyril Monk, Reginald Goood, Lawrence Campbell, Laurence Godfrey Smith, and Carl Gotsch will contribute to the programme. The plan is at Nicholson's.

TOWN HALL RED CROSS CONCERT.

The patriotic concert which is being given under the musical direction of Mrs. Haffenden Smith in aid of the Red Cross Fund will take place in the Town Hall next Friday. The State Military Band, directed by Captain Barclay, will play. Mr. Nicholas J. Gehde will play his original Storm Fantasie on the organ, and Mme. The proceeds are in aid of the Red Cross Society. The programme for the first recital will include "Chiselling," "Lessons in Love," "The Tryst at the Gate," and a new sketch, "Over Sunday." SOUTH-STREET COMPETITIONS.

As it has been rumoured in this and the other States that the South-street competitions at Ballarat were to be postponed, the management announces that this is incorrect, and that they will go on as usual. The entries received are far ahead of last years, and, in any case, it would be an impossibility to put off this great musical event. All the judges have been appointed. Mr. J. W. Beswick, the band judge, is on his way out from England, and most of the choirs and bands have fixed their accommodation. The entries are classified, and complete details are now available.

FAMILY TRAGEDY.

FATHER, MOTHER, AND CHILDREN KILLED.

A dreadful tragedy occurred at South Strathfield yesterday, a woman and her two children being killed, evidently by the husband and father, who subsequently committed suicide.

About 3.30 p.m. yesterday, two fruit and vegetable hawkers called at the residence of Mr. Victor Edward Robins, at the corner of Liverpool-road and Long-street, South Strathfield. One of them, named Robert Brebner, of 28 Norton-street, Glebe, went on to the verandah, and he saw a man lying on the floor of the washhouse, with his head covered with blood, and his throat cut from ear to ear. Brebner informed the police.

Investigation in the washhouse showed the dead body of Victor Edward Robins, lying in a pool of blood. Death had occurred some hours previous, for the body was quite cold. Alongside the body was a blood-stained razor.

Constable Pemberton then examined the house. In the bathroom he made a terrible discovery. Lying on the floor were two little children, both dead, and in the bath was the mother of them, lying in the bottom with her throat cut from ear to ear.

The police inquiries have led them to the conclusion that Victor Edward Robins first killed his wife, Elizabeth Robins, in the bathroom, by cutting her throat with a razor. Then Robins turned on the two little ones, and strangled them. The ages of the children were—Beryl 4 years, Victor 2 years.

All the victims were fully clothed. Robins, who was only 26 years of age, was in business as a boot and shoe manufacturer in Treadgold-street, Leichhardt. His wife was about 24 or 25 years of age.

A brother of Robins resided at South Strathfield, where the tragedy occurred. In a statement he made to the police, he said he left the house shortly before 8 o'clock yesterday morning. Mrs. Robins and the little boy Victor were out of bed then, for when he left Mrs. Robins was preparing her husband's breakfast. He did not see either his brother or the little girl before he went to work. On the previous evening he saw the whole family, and husband and wife appeared on the very best terms and in good health and spirits. The husband was very fond of his children.

BETTING PROSECUTION.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

By a majority decision to-day the State Full Court held that a private letter-box at the General Post Office is not a "place" within the meaning of the sections of the Police Offences Act controlling betting. The matter arose out of an appeal by Solomon Green against the decision of the Melbourne Court of Petty Sessions, fining him £30 on a charge of having used a private box at the General Post Office for the purposes of betting. The appeal was allowed, and the conviction was quashed.

MACHINERY.

ANY CABINETMAKER CAN INCREASE PROFITS WITH SUCH LABOUR-SAVING TOOLS AS THESE.

Rapid production points the way to big profits. Do the work as well as it can be done—but get it out quick. Handwork was all right in the good old days—when men had time to burn. But such methods went the way of the tallow-dip. If you are out for the BIG things in your line, here are the tools that will help you to get them.

T. and R. LEES' 4-CUTTER PLANER, planes or moulds four sides at once. It will also plane, joint, tongue, and groove, rebate, and thickness all kinds of timber and work mouldings and skirtings, etc., etc.

T. and R. LEES' TENONING MACHINE, cuts tenons up to 5½in long at one operation, and admits timber up to 15in by 6in. Invaluable to factories turning out wood framings, doors, windows, shelvings, ship's grates, etc., etc.

"CRESCENT" BANDSAW, a tool that will put "ginger" into your men. Cuts faster than the timber can be put up—gives maximum efficiency and makes for bigger profits. Worth investigating, anyway.

We also stock Double Surfacers and Moulders, for big mill work, Circular Saws, Benches, Log Band Mills, Panel Planers, 3 and 4 cutter Planers, Spindle Moulders, etc., etc.

FURTHER PROOF OF DICK'S BELTS, MADE IN SCOTLAND.

Dear Sir,—In response to your question as to what I think of Dick's Belts, after years of experience with all kinds of belts, including other Balatas, I can safely say there is no other belt yet on the market to equal Dick's Belts, for woodworking machines; the high speeds and small pulleys on this class of machinery require the utmost strength, combined with pliability. I find Dick's require so little attention they are practically troubleproof, and last such a long time; they are the most economical belts I can use, both as regards cost and efficiency. I cannot too strongly recommend anyone giving them a trial on any drive where great grip or speed are desired. Yours faithfully, F. J. FRANKLIN, per A. and E. ELLIS.

Dick's Belts are the most economical where efficiency and durability are taken into consideration. For modern high speeds Dick's Belts remain unrivalled. Beware of the numerous cheap imitations. THE RETURN OF TULLE TO FASHION.

Tulle is so soft, so delicate, so dainty, so feminine in its loveliness—it imparts such youthful appearance to the wearer—that nothing could stem the tide of its return to popularity.

When buying Tulle do not be content merely to ask for "rainproof Tulle"—say "'Dynamo' Rainproof Tulle, please," and look for the name on the card on which the Tulle is wound.

This is important, because even a mist will ruin the most expensive ordinary Tulle; but "Dynamo" is waterproof. When wet you simply shake it until dry. It immediately regains the appearance it had when new.

"Dynamo" Rainproof Tulle does not stick to the fingers when handled. Its fresh crispness, its lustre and beauty of colouring are not impaired by exposure to the strongest sunlight, and it never becomes tender or limp.

All the best Milliners use "Dynamo" Rainproof Tulle. All the best Stores sell it by the yard. But be sure you get the genuine. The name is on the end of the card on which the Tulle is wound. If any difficulty in obtaining locally, send direct to address below, stating colour, quantity, and price per yard, and we will see that you are immediately supplied.

"DYNAMO" RAINPROOF TULLE,

36ins wide. In Black, White, and all fashionable shades, 9d, 10½d, 1/, 1/3, and 1/6 per yard upwards.

FRECKLES AND TAN REMOVED.

Women folk everywhere are finding out how much better it is to remove skin worries than to hide them with powder and creams. For instance, Thermol removes all kinds of freckles and tan and sallowness, and those queer ugly marks that women folk advancing in years seem to get, and then your skin is just as clear, as fresh, as pretty and womanly as you could wish. This is a new complexion for you—it is a never-fading one, for is it not your own warm, living, pulsating flesh? How much better is THAT complexion than one born in a powder-box? That complexion is as short-lived as a dream. No matter if you can hardly put a pin between your freckles—no matter if your arms and neck and hands and face are as brown and as tanned as a gipsy's, Thermol will bring its "clear-skin" message to you, and leave you with a skin that to you will give never-ending pleasure and pride. . . . If pimples, blackheads, open pores, eczema, or ring-worm are the worry, Lethol Ointment will bring health and purity to your stricken skin. Ask your doctor about Lethol Ointment—he knows. Thermol is 3/9 (post free 4/1), Lethol is 3/ (post free 3/3), from Durno, Ltd., Chemists, Pitt-street, Sydney. It is so much better to be rid of the freckles and tan than to always have them with you.

A DELICACY IN TEA.

Everyone has heard of the wealthy mandarins of China securing the most highly cultivated and expensive growths of Pure China Tea. For years only very rich people could afford to buy it, but to-day Lipton's are offering precisely the same tea in

LIPTON'S CARAVAN CHINA TEA.

It has an exquisite flavour—soft and mellow, with a tonic quality that tempts the jaded appetite.
It is the finest pure China tea obtainable in the world.

NO MORE GREY FALLING HAIR.

Readers of English and Continental magazines will recollect reading numerous articles dealing with that remarkable remedy for grey hair, called Surmanol, discovered by a Manchester hair physician about two years ago. Eminent authorities declared at the time that Surmanol would prove a blessing to mankind, and, without doubt, it has. Grey hair is caused by the colour glands on the scalp becoming weak through old age, or worry, or sickness, or scalp disease, or other cause. The supply of colour oil (which gives the hair its colour) is, therefore, shut off from the hair. Surmanol makes these weakened colour glands strong and healthy, and once again the colour oil is passing into the hair. In a few short weeks every trace of the greyness is quite banished, the hair being precisely the colour it was before it went grey. You then leave off using Surmanol for all time, because that greyness can never—never return. It is simply splendid to know that one, therefore, is free from the prospect of staining the hair with dyes, and the saving of expense is considerable. Surmanol is as pure as it is harmless, and is registered and guaranteed under the Pure Foods Act of N.S.W. It does not stain at all—it is just a wonderful tonic for the colour glands. . . For falling hair, dandruff, and baldness, Kiol is truly surprising. Surmanol is 5/ (post free 5/9), Kiol is 5/ (post free 5/9), from the Edgeworth Laboratories, Hoffnung's-chambers, First Floor, 163 Pitt-street, Sydney, third door from G.P.O. (upstairs).

CREME SIMON does not produce hair, but it does cleanse and soothe the skin.

XXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXX

I APPEAL TO ALL WOMEN

WHO HAVE tried unsuccessfully to remove their

and have been discouraged by failure after failure, and hours of worry, only to see the hairs coming through the skin, not as they were, but twice as strong and three times the original growth.

NOW, I ASK YOU, EVERY ONE, NOT TO STAY AWAY and think over your blemishes, but

COME TO ME AND HAVE A CHAT.

I am a woman who can understand how you feel, and not only will I sympathise with you, but will gladly remove and then place them under a magnifying glass, which must convince you that my

FOURTEEN YEARS' EXPERIENCE

has made me a conscientious worker for women, and you will say, as many others,
"WHY DID I NOT COME TO YOU BEFORE?"
"But I was told it would be so painful. Why, that is not as bad as pricking your finger." These, and many other remarks, day after day, have been told me. So again I say,

A CHAT WILL COST YOU NOTHING, SO JUST COME IN WHEN IN TOWN.

You will have every privacy, as each lady is given a separate room, and under no conditions is a name divulged.

ONE HUNDRED POUNDS REWARD, if a failure is proved.

HAVE YOU WRINKLES?

which are more often caused by sluggish circulation and skin which is in need of nourishment, and, I am sorry to say, caused by women's own neglect, as I find on an average that out of fifty ladies who come to me for treatment ten attend to their skin before retiring, and this, in many cases, is the cause of all their skin trouble.

I WILL TELL YOU WHAT TO DO.

"NETTOYER" FACE CREAM

is going to help you. It is not expensive, only 2/6 PER POT, 6d EXTRA POSTAGE, AND

"NETTOYER" FRECKLE CREAM, at 5/ PER POT, POSTAGE 6d EXTRA. It removes all SUNBURN, TAN, and FRECKLES.

IF YOU CANNOT CALL, WRITE FOR A BOOKLET.

MOLES OF ALL KINDS are removed without scar, and can be done in one operation.
